Senate Approves Drastic 8 Billion War Tax

Levy Made Effective Automatically When U. S. Enters Conflict

Excess Profits Tax Added to Regular Defense Levy; Measure Headed for House-Senate Conference.

By The Associated Press.
WASHINGTON, June 19.—The senate passed the defense revenue bill tonight after adding an excess profits levy to raise between $400,000,000 and $500,000,000 annually and inserting a drastic war profits tax which would provide additional billions in the event of war.

Approval of the two changes in the measure, which had called for $1,007,000,000 of new taxes took administration lieutenants by surprise. They opposed the excess profits tax, which would be effective at once, but many voted for the proposal to impose heavy additional taxes in the event of war.

Senator Connally, Democrat, Texas, sponsoring the latter amendment, estimated that it would raise $8,000,000,000 a year from individuals alone and possibly as much from corporations. It would become effective automatically upon a congressional declaration of war.

Top-Heavy Vote.
The vote on final passage of the bill was announced as 75 to 5. The dissenting votes were cast by four Republicans—Austin, Vermont; Gurney, South Dakota;

GEORGIANS VOTE FOR PROFITS TAX

WASHINGTON, June 19.—(P)—Both Georgia senators, Richard B. Russell and Walter F. George, voted tonight for approval of the drastic war-profits rider to the tax bill. The rider was adopted, 51-28.

Hale, Maine, and Taft, Ohio—and one Farmer-Laborite, Lundeen, Minnesota.
The measure next will be sent to a conference committee of senators and representatives to consider the tax increases voted by the senate alone. Democratic leaders indicated that both the excess profits and war profits proposals would be thrown out in the conference.

They said that such legislation should be enacted only after full study by both the house ways and means and the senate finance committees. The conference group will meet tomorrow or Friday.

Pay As You Go.

Connally's war profits levy was adopted, 51 to 28, as a substitute for a similar amendment offered by Senator Bone, Democrat, Washington. Connally said it had been worked out by Treasury experts and would put the country on a "pay-as-you-go" basis automatically at the outbreak of war.

Georgians Back Of Compulsory Military Service

Leaders in State Support Roosevelt's Plan for Training.

Georgia wants compulsory military training, and her citizen leaders yesterday rallied to the support of President Roosevelt's most recent plan for insuring the national defense.

A cross-section of Georgia thought—as expressed in resolutions by clubs, by club leaders, mayors and the man on the street—yesterday showed the state wholeheartedly behind the proposal for compulsory military training.

Military training will give the boys better physiques and teach them discipline as well as knowledge of how best to defend this nation, a majority of Georgians said.

The President's proposal calls for the eventual government service—military or in allied activity—of the nation's young men and probably girls, for a period of one year.

Here are some of the comments made yesterday:

J. Hunter Hopkins, Mayor of Brunswick, Ga.—"I am definitely in favor of military training for all youth as advocated by administration in Washington. I believe entire community feels the same."

Thomas L. Bell, Mayor of Americus, Ga.—"I am personally in favor of universal military training and would like to see it in all schools. It would give the boys a better physique and teach them discipline. I have interviewed about 50 businessmen and found them 100 per cent in favor of the administration program."

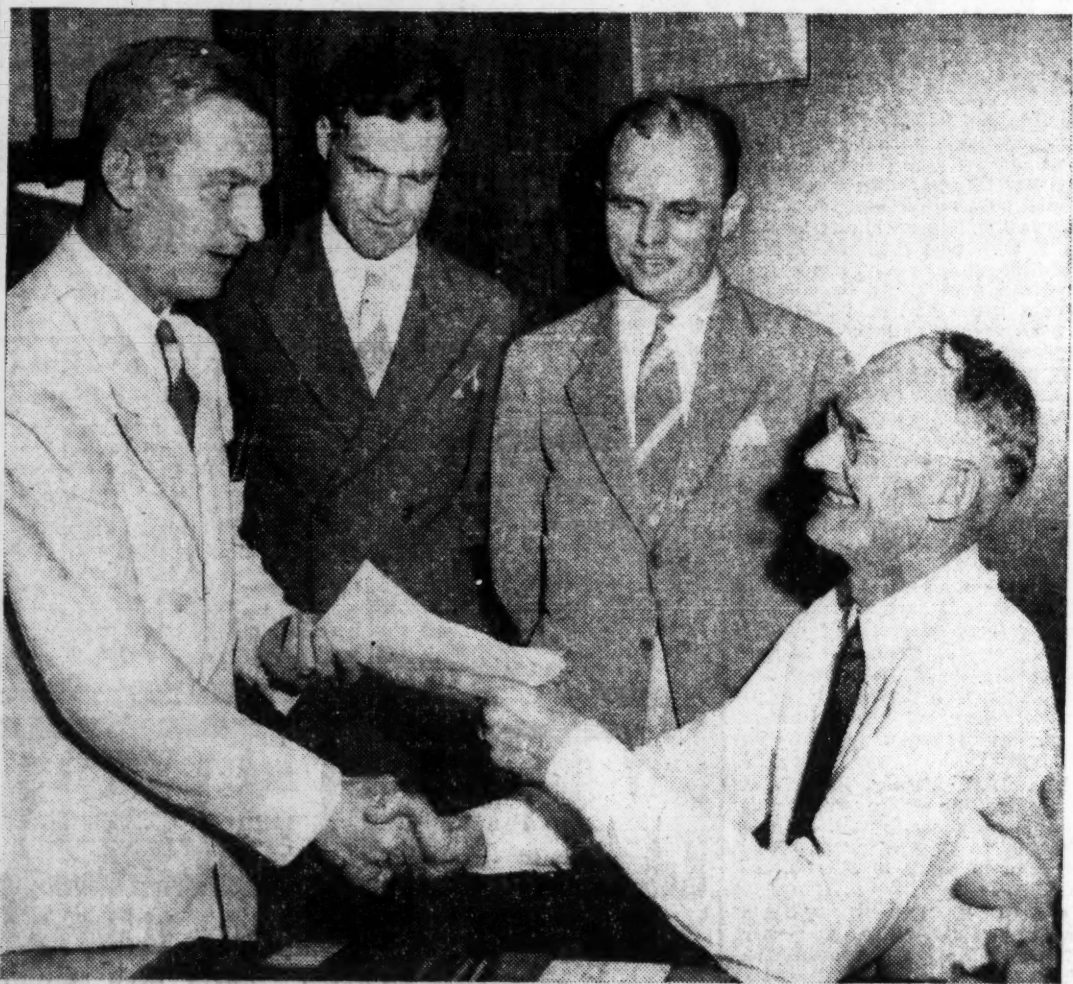

Edward Murrah, Mayor of Columbus, Ga.—"I heartily endorse plan of administration for universal military training of all youth. Hope it will be effective earliest possible moment."

A. F. Newman, City Manager of Decatur.—"Offhand, I'd say that if the preparedness program of the administration requires military training of all youth, I would be in favor of it."

George Harris, Mayor of College Park.—"It would be the finest move ever made. We owe that much time to our government."

John R. Brown, City Manager of Cordele, Ga.—"We approve the proposal for universal military training for all youth as advocated by the Washington administration. We feel that we should do this even if no war emergency existed. The youth of our country should be prepared to defend the country even if they should be called on to do so overnight. England and France and other nations have paid and are paying a terrible price on account of their failure to do this."

FOOD PLANNERS—Earl Dahlberg, program organizer of the Federal Surplus Commodities Credit Corporation, talked over the food stamp plan yesterday. Left to right are Dahlberg, Henry Mays Jr., director of the county welfare department; Jack Maziar, representative of the local retail food dealers, and Braswell Deen, director of the State Department of Public Welfare. The plan starts July 15. (Story on Page 7.)

Tech Teacher Designs Deadly 100-Ton Tank

Major Case's 'Trench on Wheels, Carries 75's, Has 5-Inch Armor.

Plans to bolster American defenses with 100-ton tanks—the largest and most deadly "mobile fortresses" yet devised—are being considered by the federal government from specifications prepared by Major A. A. Case, associate superintendent of shops of the Georgia Tech mechanical school.

Reluctant even to admit that he has submitted plans to army engineers, Major Case yesterday was cautious about his invention but, it was learned from unimpeachable sources, that the major has been working on plans for the new juggernaut of destruction for several months, and that it will be the most deadly of its species.

Trench on Wheels.

Armed with 75-mm. guns and protected by five-inch armor plate, the tank will be a "trench on wheels," according to descriptions. The monster's speed will be just about equal to those of the German 80-ton tanks which have been successful in crushing every force which has yet been pitted against them in Europe, and its advantages will be heavier armor and heavier armaments.

Major Case asserted that plans and specifications for the tank already are in the hands of army experts, but said "nothing may ever come of it."

He was enthusiastic, however, about its possibilities as both a defensive and offensive weapon. The tank he and his associates have designed would surpass any other yet developed.
Tougher Than Nazis.
Although the Nazi tanks are armed with 75-mm. guns, they could not take as much punishment as the new tank proposed by Major Case, according to reports. The Case tank would be propelled with a larger and more powerful motor than the German tank.
Another feature would be its more effective defense against attacks, and the fact that it could do "everything except climb sheer mountain canyons."

(The Glover Manufacturing Company, of Marietta, and Major Case have worked out a plan to convert the Marietta factory into a munitions plant. Story on Page 13.)

Germans Taxed To Finance Propaganda, Ralph McGill Discovers; Dietrich's Intrigue Amazes Agents of the U. S.

By RALPH MCGILL.
MEXICO CITY, Mexico, June 17.—(By Air Mail.)—Mexico had, and has, a "fifth column."

At present the enemy within the gates is marking time. Its leader, Arthur Dietrich, had been expelled. He popularly is reported to be related to Germany's famed Otto Dietrich, first assistant to Germany's master of propaganda and subversive organization, Joseph Goebbels.

Mexico has about 6,500 Germans.

There are more than 40,000 Spaniards in Mexico and slightly more than 4,000 Italians. Most of the Spaniards are hostile to Germany, being refugees from General Franco.

"Refugees" Traitors.

But, following the plan employed in Europe, a number of the Spaniards are not refugees at all but are members of the fifth column. Just as Holland's defeat was assisted by a number of "refugees," so was Mexico's fifth column aided by refugees from Spain.

Dietrich admitted, and it generally was known, the Germans in Mexico were taxed a minimum of four pesos each week to assist in carrying on the propaganda in this country. This means that a number of them were taxed hundreds of pesos each week. Dietrich, with the customary German thoroughness, knew what each of the Germans made and how much each had in the bank. He also knew what relatives each had in Germany.

Fantastic Aspects.
People of the United States, accustomed to movies about secret agents, look upon any story concerning them as somewhat fantastic. The work done does have some fantastic aspects. But, unfortunately, they are true.

Before he was ordered expelled, Dietrich had admitted to some of his associates that France's first two armies were turned over to the enemy by generals under the influence of Germany. The same thing happened, the world now

British Battle Waves of Nazi Bombing Planes

Coast Areas Raided Second Time; German Towns Attacked.

By The Associated Press.
LONDON, June 20.—(Thursday)—Britain and Germany fought out in the air early today a renewed series of preliminary skirmishes of the Battle of England.

Wide-ranging moves of German planes dropped bombs on England's shores for the second successive night and British bombers apparently repaid the call in Germany.

Bombs exploded near a north-east coastal town, and anti-aircraft fighters battled off other raiders from Scotland to south of London.

Midnight Raid.

The air-raid alarm on the east coast of Scotland was lifted after half an hour.

The first alarms were sounded just before midnight, and a few minutes after midnight the Bremen and Hamburg radio stations went silent, probably indicating British airmen had been detected on their third successive night-covered visit to Germany's busy northwest industrial and shipping section.

At 3 o'clock (9 o'clock last night Atlanta time) gunfire and explosions still were heard in north-east England, where bombs were being dropped. The sound of machinegun fire went on for a considerable time after British fighter planes took the air, and the raiders also encountered heavy opposition from ground batteries.

A powerful searchlight caught one raider in its beam and it made off toward the sea with fighter planes shooting tracer bullets in its wake.

The all-clear signal was sounded after three hours and a quarter in one town in northeast England.

Other German planes were heard flying high over a southeast coastal town.

Second Attack.

Sirens screamed on the east coast of Scotland.

The raiders struck, too, on the east coast of England. British fighter machines loosed their machineguns upon them there.

It was the second successive night of the terror of invasion from the skies—a definite commencement to the Battle of England, the long-awaited sequel to the lost Battle of France.

The raiders appeared just before midnight, as they had last night, crossing the east and southern coasts. Tonight, however, the invaded area was bigger.

Follows Prediction.

The first phase of this battle for Britain burst with a fury of bombings, just as Prime Minister Winston Churchill had predicted it would. It had ended in the dawn of this morning after waves of Nazi planes had struck at east coast towns and shipping along the lower Thames, killing 12 and wounding 30. Seven German planes were shot down in the first raid.

In reply, squadrons of heavy British bombers smashed rail centers and industrial concentrations of northeastern Germany and the Rhineland.

Britain's search for guns—she has the men—went far afield. Parliament was told the government is studying purchase of tanks, guns, airplanes and other war weapons from Soviet Russia.

Germany's "paper partner." Already, Britain has given America a virtual blank check for munitions, even of World War vintage.

Hitler Peace Terms Called 'Intolerable'; More Cities Fall

Air Force Reported Fleeing Country; Fleet Believed To Be Continuing Co-ordination With England.

TOKYO, June 20.—(AP)—The foreign office announced lifting of the Tientsin blockade effective at noon today (10 p. m. Atlanta time Wednesday), following the signing of an agreement with Britain and France.

By The Associated Press.

Refugee-jammed Bordeaux, provisional capital of beleaguered France, was bombed four times last night while a fighting French government, having learned enough of the Hitler-Mussolini peace terms to decide they are intolerable, was reported to have gone or preparing to flee to Africa to carry on the war against the Axis partners.

Newspaper correspondents were forced to take refuge in a cellar during the Bordeaux raids.

They heard the German planes sweeping over the open city at low altitudes, bombing the streets and buildings jammed with refugees.

An undetermined number of persons were killed and wounded. Two of the bombs scored hits on refugee shelters.

Important buildings in the city, which the French government had declared an open city, appeared to be main targets.

The bombings came a little after 1:30 a. m.

The thunder of exploding bombs came just as the townspeople, waiting for word of an armistice, had begun to hope they had found refuge and were safe.

Bordeaux has a normal population of approximately 250,000, but is jammed now with refugees bringing the number it shelters to perhaps five times that many.

Meanwhile, it was said that President Albert LeBrun and other leaders had gone, or were about to go, to Algiers in north Africa, and thus carry out the first step of former Premier Reynaud's threat to retreat fighting to Africa, and even to America, before submitting to Germany.

These reports, which were not confirmed from official sources, said nothing of Marshal Henri Philippe Petain, who succeeded Reynaud as premier last Sunday and who immediately sought peace terms.

(A new French note was handed to Jose Lequerica, Spanish ambassador to France and go-between in the French-German peace negotiations, for transmission to Berlin, it was revealed in Madrid, the United Press reported.)

Already masses of French planes were in flight to north Africa. Some of them were forced to alight at Spanish ports and islands before reaching their destination.

On blitzkrieg schedule the German high command enumerated a

Nazis Near Exhaustion.
In Geneva, reports brought by refugees indicated the possibility that the German war machine was so near exhaustion that the French might successfully defend Lyon, their third largest city, a manufacturing center whose normal population is about 570,000.

The defense of Lyon fell, in part, to comparatively fresh troops from the now virtually abandoned Maginot line. The last skeleton garrisons of the great fortress

Youth Migration Board Is Named

LONDON, June 19.—(AP)—Great Britain has created a "reception board" to handle migration of British children to overseas havens, including the United States.

The board proposes to send as many of England's 6,000,000 school-age youngsters as parents will part with, as many as available ship can carry and overseas reception areas would be prepared to take.

Already Canada is asking for 10,000, Australia for 5,000, New Zealand for 2,500, South Africa for "several thousand."

United States requests have come from various unnamed associations. No estimates of the number wanted is available and details of the plan, so far as the United States is concerned, are incomplete.

Georgia Solons Like Universal Training Plan

Approval Is Expressed, Though Further Study Sought.

By GLADSTONE WILLIAMS, Staff Correspondent.

WASHINGTON, June 19.—Georgia delegation members in congress today for the most part expressed hearty accord with President Roosevelt's announcement yesterday that he soon will recommend legislation to adopt some form of universal military training as part of the nation's defense program.

Especially emphatic was Senator Richard B. Russell, who pointed out that he has "always been in favor" of such training. No direct opposition was expressed in any quarter, although some desired further study before rendering a final opinion.

Senator Russell said: "I always have been in favor of compulsory military training. I believe it to be of the utmost importance to the future welfare of our nation. Such training will be the means of saving the lives of thousands of men in the event of war. The training is most necessary."

Senator George stated: "I am in sympathy with the President's proposal. However, I believe that the times just now seem to be too indefinite for universal military training."

Senator George sought unsuccessfully last week to have included in CCC camp programs a voluntary military drill course. Comment of the representatives was:

Representative Sidney Camp: "I have always been of the opinion that military training of this type is essential. Ever since my World War experience, during which I saw raw soldiers sent to the front without more than meager training, I have been in favor of regular training. The idea is not entirely new to this country. We had militia districts in Georgia and offered training twice a month to all for many years."

Representative Willis R. Gibbs: "I believe in preparedness and appreciate that military training of this type can be of great value. However, because of the importance of such a proposal to this nation, I prefer to give more consideration to the matter before reaching a decision."

Representative Frank Wheelchel: "This is a very far-reaching proposition. I have not had time to study it fully, and for that reason have not reached a decision."

Representatives Carl Vinson, Robert Ramspeck, Paul Brown, E. E. Cox and Hugh Peterson preferred not to comment today, deciding to wait until they have had more opportunity to consider the President's plan. Representatives Malcolm Tarver and Stephen Pace could not be reached for opinions.

Draft Advocated By Colonel Adler

NEW YORK, June 19.—(AP)—Colonel Julius Ochs Adler, general manager of the New York Times, today urged the delegates to the National Editorial Association convention to support a program calling for the compulsory enlistment of a United States air force of 1,000,000 men and an army of 3,000,000 to 4,000,000 soldiers.

Colonel Adler said the Military Training Camps Association would ask congress this week to enact a bill providing for compulsory military service.

"We advocate compulsory service because we believe that if we have a trained army this man (Hitler) will leave us alone," he added.

TRAIN YOUTH—Mayor Thomas L. Bell, of Americus, yesterday advocated compulsory military training for young men of America, saying it will train them physically in addition to strengthening defense.

BACKS PRESIDENT—Mayor Edward Murrain, of Columbus, site of Fort Benning, the army infantry school, declares he favors President Roosevelt's proposal for compulsory training of American youth.

count of the lack of preparedness."

G. E. Pilgrim, Mayor of Savannah, Ga.—"I heartily favor universal military training for all youth, with part time devoted to education and trade. Thus every American man would be able to make a living and ready to protect his home and country if threatened."

W. B. Haley, Mayor of Albany, Ga.—"I am the father of four boys, three of whom have had military training. I am heartily in favor of universal military training for all youth as advocated by our administration in Washington."

O. Lee White, Atlanta, Third Ward Civic League: "We're going to have to have it. It's the only thing that will save the nation—putting it on a prepared basis."

Mrs. C. W. O'Rear, Fulton County Teachers' Association: "I don't believe in compulsory military training but I do think a voluntary program would be helpful."

Mrs. J. C. Stanley, East Point Woman's Club—"The President's view is my view in this. I agree with him in training the youth of the land in order to avert invasion."

Claude S. Bennett, Atlanta Jewelers' Guild—"If it's necessary I think such a program should be carried out. The President is in a better position to know the present needs and we should follow his judgment."

C. V. Parham, Atlanta Association of Credit Men: "I'm inclined to be favorable. We have to maintain a larger army and that's the best way to get it, provided the training period is not too long."

J. W. Battles, Decatur Rotary Club: "It looks like it would be better to have an army already prepared because of the speed with which things move in Europe."

Mrs. C. S. Winter, Kirkwood P. T. A. Council—"I certainly believe in preparedness and military training is the safest thing to do. Women should be included in the program."

Mrs. M. A. Lochridge, Morning-side P. T. A. Council—"I'm against compulsory training because it will put us on the same plane as Germany and Italy. I prefer the preparedness program to follow along other channels."

J. W. Humphries, Atlanta Optimist Club—"It might be a very good thing and probably would be beneficial to youth regardless of the military advantages."

W. Brown Hayes, East Side Inter-Civic Association—"It should have been done 20 years ago. It's good for youth physically, mentally and every other way."

George Moore, Greek Civic Club of Atlanta—"It's a good thing. Every young man should have the opportunities military training would afford."

Charles Roberts, Atlanta Bakers' Club—"In a modified form, I think it's an excellent idea. A certain amount of training is excellent, such as the program covered by the President's four groups."

I. J. Osburn, Atlanta Kennel Club: "Right now it looks like we ought to have it."

Mrs. B. A. Alderman, Candler Park Improvement Club—"I don't believe in compulsory training. I prefer it to be on a voluntary basis."

G. O. P. Hails Lewis Attack On Roosevelt

CIO Chief Describes Compulsory Training as 'Fantastic.'

PHILADELPHIA, June 19.—(AP)—A blunt statement from John L. Lewis that President Roosevelt's proposal for compulsory national service was a "fantastic suggestion from a mind in full intellectual rereat" brought a burst of applause today from the Republican resolutions committee.

The CIO leader was one of a continuous stream of speakers before the policy-forming committee meeting in the increasing hubbub of the throng already arriving for the national convention opening next Monday.

Lewis, his rival, William Green, American Federation of Labor president, a spokesman for the National Association of Manufacturers and other speakers outlined to the committee what they believe should be included in the Republican platform.

The committee, endeavoring to write a plank expressing the party's viewpoint on foreign relations, was informed by Green that the AFL favors "every ounce of assistance and supplies" to European democracies "short of our entry into the war."

Mr. Roosevelt's compulsory service idea was the subject of much discussion, mostly unfavorable, throughout the day. There was talk of writing a plank on the subject.

The CIO leader impartially berated both the Republican and Democratic parties for their past records on labor and unemployment.

Lasser Quits as Head Of Workers' Alliance

WASHINGTON, June 19.—(AP)—David Lasser today resigned as national president of the Workers Alliance of America, charging that the organization of relief workers was under the control of a "political group."

He refused to say what group he meant. There have been charges, by Dies committee members and others, that Communists held key positions in the organization.

Two Atlantans To Serve on Defense Board

U. S. Chamber Summons Draper, Woolford to Meeting Today.

Atlantans moved yesterday to co-ordinate efforts in helping speed the national defense program and eliminate causes of delay.

Jesse Draper and T. Guy Woolford were reappointed southern representatives on the national defense board of the United States Chamber of Commerce and were summoned to a special meeting of the group with Admiral Harold R. Stark, chief of naval operations, and General George Marshall, army chief of staff, in Washington this morning.

Mr. Draper left yesterday. Mr. Woolford is out of the city and will be unable to attend.

Draper said "just before departing by plane."

Ex-officio members of this board of businessmen are Admiral Stark, General Marshall, Rear Admiral J. H. Powell, head of the navy air force, and Major General Henry H. Arnold, head of the army air force. President James S. Kemmer of the C. of C., called the meeting.

McINTOSH LEGION PAYS ALL DUES

Thomas Potter Is Drowned in College Lake

Was Son of Dr. B. J. Potter, Former Church Organist Here.

Thomas C. Potter, 24-year-old route carrier for an Atlanta newspaper and son of Dr. B. J. Potter, former organist at the Trinity Methodist church, was drowned yesterday afternoon in Silver Lake, near Oglethorpe University, DeKalb county, police reported.

With him at the time was Miss Emily Mosley, 21, of 755 Myrtle street, an employee of the state industrial board.

She told DeKalb county officers, "We had been rowing around the lake and had halted on the far side before starting back. During this time I was swimming around while Potter remained at the boat, as he was not a very good swimmer."

She said she returned and got in the boat to dry her hair while Potter held the side of the boat.

"Then he shoved off from the boat and started to swimming around, but was unable to make it back to the boat. He shouted for help and I tried to push the boat over to him, but did not make it in time," she added.

Miss Mosley said she screamed for help and several other persons on the lake came and searched for the body.

Later the DeKalb county police were summoned and dragged the lake, but were unable to find the body.

Potter lived with a brother, Benjamin, at the rear of 818 Pont de Leon avenue. His father, who is now a resident of Jacksonville, Fla., for many years taught music at Brenau College.

Gamble Urges That Congress Speed Training

Savannah Mayor Believes Public Will Support Defense Preparation.

Mayor Thomas Gamble, of Savannah, yesterday issued the following statement in connection with proposed plans for universal training for American youth:

"The term universal military training for youth carries various implications. It might mean taking all American boys between certain years and putting them in the army continuously for a year or two as in Germany or France or Russia, or it might mean taking some of their time while in the high schools and colleges of the country and in the CCC camps or in the national guard and giving them somewhat intensive military training for whatever period is deemed necessary while they continue their studies or pursue their regular vocations as a means of livelihood.

"I think the public sentiment will justify the latter type of military training for all able-bodied youth within certain reasonable age limits and that the congress should give prompt and careful consideration to this question and adopt detailed plans under which such military training is to be imparted.

"The country unquestionably is in favor of a well-devised plan of adequate permanent national defense and this necessarily embraces some measure of military training for the youth.

"I believe the American people look to congress to remain in session to prepare such plans so that the plans may have the intelligent patriotic reaction of the public and that congress should continue in session to meet all other emergencies which may confront the nation during the coming months."

Upson needs to get away from it all

IT'S a shame the way Upson flies off the handle so regularly. He's not a bad fellow at heart, but he gets so excited and upset—and then he fumes and fusses at everybody within reach. His influence on the rest of the office is far from happy or soothing.

The Boss shakes his head and mutters things to the effect that Upson needs to get away from it all; which is rather awkward in view of the fact that Upson has just come back from his vacation. Furthermore, the Boss is beginning to wonder if Upson's name on the payroll isn't more of an ornament than an asset to the business.

Upson is under the delusion that he is a human dynamo and is burning up the last ounce of energy in the interest of his job, but the truth is he only has a bad case of nerves.

He could easily cure this distressing condition if he would ride street cars to town in the morning. Then, instead of reaching the office tired and irritable, he would be refreshed and rested—ready to pitch into the day's work.

City Restrained $60,000 Mark From Stopping Water to Park Passed in Drive For Red Cross

Court Prohibits Halting Service To Collect Lakewood Bill.

The city of Atlanta was restrained yesterday from cutting off the water from Lakewood park as a means of collecting a past-due bill, as another step in the long controversy between the Southeastern Fair Association and the city. Judge Paul S. Etheridge issued the order on the fair association's position.

Long-exempt from payment of water bills under an agreement, the fair association was presented a bill for $42,457.60 gross or $26,581.54 net for water from August 10, 1932, to April 16, 1940, and was threatened the water would be cut off if the bill wasn't paid, the injunction petition set forth.

Judge Etheridge, in his order, pointed out that he was not restraining the city from pursuing any other method of collecting the bill other than cutting the water off. The fair association denied it owed any money to the city for the time being.

Johnson's Widow To Get Back Pay

Salary due the late Edwin F. Johnson, Fulton county tax collector, was ordered paid his widow yesterday by Judge Paul S. Etheridge in Fulton superior court.

Army Enlistments Sought by Convicts

REIDSVILLE, Ga., June 19.—(P)—An editorial in the Tattnall Tattler, magazine published by inmates at Georgia's state prison, suggests that "thousands and thousands" of convicts in the United States be allowed to enlist as soldiers to fight for democracy.

Headed "Convicts and War," and written by J. Charles Gregory, the editorial in the current issue of the magazine says in part: "In many prisons throughout this nation are thousands and thousands of men, able-bodied and ready to fight for their democracy. The number of ex-convicts swells the total to millions. . . .

"And if we are killed on the battlefield, we leave one thing to our fellow countrymen and loved ones: We died honorably."

SAD REUNION—On the personal plea of his mother, Odie V. Fluker, serving life for the slaying of Eddie Guyol, was allowed to come to Atlanta from Tattnell prison yesterday to view the body of his wife, Jean Hart Fluker, who after fighting for his freedom for a five-year period during which he was under a death sentence, took her own life last Sunday night. Shown (left to right) are A. D. Mayo, Mrs. Medie Shaw, mother of Fluker's late wife; Fluker, and his mother, Mrs. Dora Fluker.

Wilson Backs Arnall Attitude On 'Red' Votes

State Secretary Ready To Bar Communist Party From Ballot.

John Wilson, secretary of state, said yesterday he would support Attorney General Ellis Arnall if any ruling is necessary on whether the names of Communist candidates will be placed on Georgia's election ballot.

Arnall already has announced that he will decide against the Communists if he is called on for a ruling, and his statement brought sharp criticism from Earl Browder, Communist candidate for President.

"Neither the Communist Party nor any other party will be certified by me unless the requirements of the law are fully met," Wilson said. "If there seems to be any doubt as to the meaning of the act, I will submit the matter at the proper time to the attorney general."

"If he rules that the Communist Party should not under our law be certified by me to the Governor to be placed on the ballot, I will abide by that ruling," he added. He explained that under the law all candidates for national and state offices must file notice of their candidacy with the secretary of state 30 days prior to the general election in November.

In 1936 he said he refused to certify the names of the candidates and electors for President and Vice President for the Communist Party because he decided they had not complied with the law.

BOY'S PENNY BET COSTLY.
Don Rowlands, eight, of Sydney, Australia, bet a penny he could walk across his street backwards. A car struck him and broke his leg, but he struggled the few remaining yards to the other side and won his bet.

Manacles Off, Fluker Weeps At Wife's Bier

Convict Released for Few Hours on Personal Plea of Mother.

Odie Fluker said goodbye last night to his Jeanie with the dark brown hair.

He came up from Tattnell prison, with handcuffs on his wrists, to kneel beside the casket of the girl who stood beside him five times to hear the sentence of death pronounced — but who couldn't go on without him when commutation of sentence separated them for life.

With his mother, Mrs. Dora Fluker, of Chicago, and hers, Mrs. Medie Shaw, beside him, he went in to say his last goodbye. His hands, freed from their manacles, covered his face, and his thin shoulders shook under a shirt of faded blue.

Back to Prison.

After a little while, he turned away to go back to Tattnell prison where the state says he must spend his life for the slaying of Eddie Guyol.

State authorities, who had denied a plea by Russell Turner, attorney for Fluker, that he be allowed to attend the funeral of his wife, relented yesterday when his mother made a personal appeal to Marvin Griffin, secretary to Governor Rivers.

On Griffin's order, Commissioner Lon Sullivan ordered highway patrolmen to bring Fluker from Tattnell prison to the undertaking establishment here.
Fluker and his wife, the former Jean Hart, met in Chicago seven years ago, he a lonesome Alabama boy working as a furniture upholsterer, she a dark-haired Alabama girl making her living as a cafe cashier.

Gives Up Struggle.

For five of their seven years together he was a prisoner, fighting for his freedom, she fighting with him all the way. Worn out with the battle to make a living alone, clinging to little hope he would ever again be free, last Sunday night in a hotel here she gave up the struggle and took her own life by drinking poison.

Funeral services for Mrs. Fluker will be held today in Clanton, Ala., under direction of Harry G. Poole.

Pinball Case Appealed To U. S. Supreme Court

Legality of approximately 500 pinball machines in Atlanta will be determined by the United States supreme court on an appeal filed yesterday by owners seeking reversal of a city ordinance barring the devices from the city.

Passed two years ago, the law has been upheld by the Fulton superior court and the state supreme court, despite a constant attack on its validity. Pinball machines have continued to operate pending final action under an injunction granted the owners.

Age of Majority Seeking Jobs Is 21-45 Years

Fulton, DeKalb Figures Show Heavy Employment Needs.

The majority of the 25,696 men and women in Fulton and DeKalb counties who were seeking work at the end of March through the Atlanta office of the Georgia Employment Service were between the ages of 21 and 45 years, Ben T. Huie, commissioner of labor, announced yesterday.

Classified according to age, applicants fell into these groups: Men under 21 years of age, 1,732; men between 21 and 45, 11,502; men 45 and over, 3,866; women under 21 years of age, 1,082; women between 21 and 45, 6,217; and women 45 and over, 1,297.

This number represented approximately one-fifth of the state's 129,402 unemployed seeking jobs, and was composed of 12,057 white men, 5,043 negro men, 6,383 white women and 2,213 negro women. Of the men, 1,078 were listed as war veterans. Skilled and semi-skilled workers formed the largest occupational groups available for employment.

City and County Join in Stamp Food Program

More Supplies for Needy, Increased Grocery Trade Seen.

Relief clients will obtain one-third again as much food as they are getting now, and the grocery trade will be benefited by an additional $150,000 a month in business when the food stamp plan goes into effect here July 15, Earl W. Dahlberg, program organizer of the Federal Surplus Commodities Corporation, said yesterday afternoon.

Atlanta and Fulton county were designated within the food stamp program of the Department of Agriculture at noon yesterday by Secretary Henry Wallace. Dahlberg will remain here for six weeks until the program is well under way.

The idea, a new method of distributing surplus foods, has been tried successfully in Macon, Augusta and Savannah. It will be carried out by the United States Department of Agriculture in cooperation with the state and county welfare departments, county commissioners, the WPA, local wholesale and retail merchants and the city's commercial banks. Purpose of the plan, according to Dahlberg, is three-fold. Markets will be broadened for farm products. More adequate diets will be provided the 50,880 needy persons eligible to participate, and business will be stimulated.

The plan does away with the distribution of surplus foods in bulk to the needy. Instead, those participating in the program will buy their commodities from the nearest market with food stamps.

For every two dollars' worth of stamps bought by relief clients, one $1 stamp will be given away, Dahlberg said, making possible an appreciable increase in the average needy person's diet.

As soon as final arrangements have been made, all commodities, including those designated "in surplus" by the Secretary of Agriculture, will be purchased by local wholesale and retail food dealers through regular commercial channels for resale.

Bankhead Seen As Democratic Party Keynoter

Farley, F. D. R. Favor Him; Selection Committee Meets Today.

CHICAGO, June 19. — (P) —

Speaker William B. Bankhead seemed destined tonight for the important post of keynoter at the Democratic national convention.

Bankhead appeared to be the likely choice after James A. Farley, chairman of the party's national committee, announced that both he and President Roosevelt favored the fluent Alabamian.

Farley told reporters that he would recommend that Representative Bankhead be named temporary chairman and keynote speaker when the 21-member committee on convention arrangements meets here tomorrow to make the selection.

He also disclosed that he would suggest that Senator Alben W. Barkley, of Kentucky, be endorsed for permanent chairman of the convention, opening here July 15. "I discussed this with the President," Farley stated at a press conference, "and he has agreed."

Farley said that Senator Robert F. Wagner, of New York, would be considered for the position of chairman of the resolutions committee.

In Washington, Speaker Bankhead said he would, "of course, accept the invitation if it is extended," to be keynoter at the Democratic convention.

Two Are Arrested As 'Bug' Suspects

Two white lottery suspects were arrested yesterday afternoon by city police in a raid on a house at 1215 Euclid avenue. They were listed at police headquarters as George N. Dods, 24, of a Virginia circle address, and Rouse Shappell, 46, of the Euclid avenue address.

The raid was conducted by Lieutenant P. H. Jones, of the city's lottery squad; City Detectives Henley Wilbur and W. G. Denmore, and Charles Stewart, of the Fulton county solicitor's office.

The officers confiscated about $400 worth of lottery tickets and an adding machine, Jones reported. The men were ordered held for DeKalb county officers inasmuch as the house which was raided was in DeKalb county.

Doctors Probe Man's Brain With Spectrum

Behavior Is Studied by Measuring Electrical Waves.

By THOMAS R. HENRY.

For North American Newspaper Alliance. NEW YORK, June 19. — A spectrum of the brain, by which the depths of man's behavior may be probed through the skull as astronomers study a star in the far depths of space, was revealed to the American Medical Association meeting here today.

It is made possible by an electrical machine which accomplishes in five minutes mathematical analyses which would keep an expert mathematician busy for 20 years.

The accomplishment was announced in an exhibit by Dr. Frederic G. Gibbs, Dr. A. M. Grass and Dr. W. G. Lennox, of Harvard University. Already nearly 3,000 brain spectra have been recorded and there are indications of a definite pattern for such abnormalities as dementia praecox and various forms of epilepsy.

Gives Off Waves. For the last six years it has been known that all parts of the brain constantly are generating electrical waves which can be measured by electrodes attached to the scalp. Two kinds of waves usually have been described—alpha waves, with frequencies of about 10 a second, and betas, with frequencies of about one a second. Also, gross patterns have been found for the whole brain which are significant in the diagnosis of epilepsy.

The difficulty has been that these waves, which can be recorded on smoked paper from scalp-attached electrodes, have been inextricably mixed up. The Harvard investigators have found that the old classifications of alpha and beta waves have no real meaning and that there is a whole range of waves with frequencies of one to 50 cycles a second. Also, they vary in energy from a millionth to a thousandth of a volt, these minute amounts of electricity being generated in some way by the chemical processes of the brain cells.

Whole Brain Mapped.

The whole brain is mapped through the skull according to the wave length and energy of its tiny currents. These vary from place to place over the cerebral cortex, the grey top of the brain which is the seat of all thought processes.

All normal brains, the doctors believe, have spectra which follow the same general pattern. Pathological brains vary in different directions from this pattern, and these variations remain to be determined after the basic pattern is ascertained from thousands of normal skulls.

Several variations within the total pattern already have been found. Thus a brain tumor causes a slowing of the waves in its immediate neighborhood. By dividing the skull into squares and testing each of these with the electrodes, it is possible to locate the tumor within a narrow area. X-rays of the brain are difficult and misleading and the cortical electricity method eliminates much probing by the surgeon.

Epilepsy is marked by an easily recognized change in the whole pattern of the brain. This indicates that the disease is a disturbance of the whole organ rather than something strictly localized that might be treated by surgery. The spectrum can be used to differentiate between generalized epilepsy and the type caused by brain injuries, where the damage is localized.

Marvin Moate To Seek Hancock Seat in House

Special to THE CONSTITUTION. SPARTA, Ga., June 19. — Senator Marvin E. Moate announced his candidacy today for Hancock county's seat in the lower house of the general assembly in the September primary.

Moate served in the house before being elected to the senate. No other candidates have announced for the place, although and these variations remain to be mentioned.

ATLANTA, GA., JUNE 20, 1940.

Training the Nation

While details are, at this stage, lacking, there can be no logical disapproval of President Roosevelt's proposal to institute a compulsory training program for all youth of the nation. Not necessarily exclusively military training, the President said at a press conference, but also training in industrial production and conservation of vital resources, all important factors should the nation ever have to go to war in its own defense.

Modern war is not waged, as a matter of fact, such training would work no hardship, either upon young men or young women, and emphasized that it would be a matter of fact, be good for them. The inclusion of young women in the plan should be welcomed. It is a recognition, more fully than ever before, that the place of women in any defense program is of importance only secondary to that of the fighting forces.

Modern war is not waged, as a matter of fact, by the armies in the field alone. It is a struggle in which the nation involved must throw its complete human, industrial and material resources into the effort. The nation fights as a whole, and the troops facing the enemy are but the spearhead of the attack which cannot succeed without the strong and unbreakable shaft of an entire nation behind.

President Roosevelt said, at the press conference, he had not yet worked out details of the plan, but might have a message to congress on the subject in four, five or six weeks. Putting such a plan into operation is not something which can be done overnight. It would require tremendous preparatory organization and there would have to be co-operation between army, navy, industry and every other factor of national life.

It would, of course, involve some sacrifice by everyone involved. It would take a year out of the civilian life of every young man and woman in the nation. It would be the hope and effort of the authorities to give to youth, however, something worth that year, in return. It should be so devised to give them not only practical training in essential war work, but at the same time provide a mode of life that would add to their physical well-being and assure, in so far as possible, a start in adult life with the equipment of a healthy body in perfect condition.

To do this, it is immediately suggested that the medical forces of the nation be so organized that not only would each boy and girl receive complete physical examination upon enrollment, but, if the need was revealed, receive proper treatment for the cure or correction of any physical disability.

By such a means the nation would benefit beyond anything ever achieved in the past. For it would give to the new generation a start in life which far too many have lacked in the past.

And it would give the nation better men and women, better in every way, to carry on the eternal struggle for a better achievement of the democratic way of life.

"Modesty"—or Safety?

A brief item in The Constitution Wednesday told of a boy who was almost strangled by rough play in the bathing pool at Piedmont park.

The life guard on duty explained he didn't observe the rough play at first, because his attention at the moment was centered on seeing that a small boy didn't enter the pool without wearing a "top" to his bathing suit. He did go to the swimmer's rescue a moment or two later.

Such devotion to duty is to be commended. The morals of this enlightened community must not be endangered by the sight of a small boy's uncovered ribs.

Ever since municipally regulated swimming pools took the place of muddy creeks and weed-grown millponds, the matter of costume has vexed our city fathers. In the early summers of the pools the rules required that persons of the female sex cover their lower extremities with stockings. There were rules on length of skirts and at one time white suits, for some occult reason, were under the official ban.

But the censors became more liberal as the years went by. It had been thought, in recent seasons, the details of bathing costumes had been left to the good taste of the wearer.

So it is surprising to learn that "tops" to bathing suits worn by male citizens are required—even by little boys. But modesty must be preserved, though it creates danger by distracting lifeguards from their proper duty and converts them into moralguards.

This can't be the ape to which man is reverting in Europe. At his worst, the ape pitches nothing deadlier than the coconut.

With a thousand planes a day taking to the air, we shall need hamburger stands in captive balloons.

What Does Lewis Want?

John L. Lewis has now completed a full circle. He took off from the Republican chicken house in 1932 and in 1940 has come home to roost. He has "discovered" in that length of time two things: (1) That President Roosevelt hasn't done anything about the depression and, (2) that Herbert Hoover didn't have anything to do with the depression—that only "self-seeking politicians" blame the former President.

It is probable, however, that several millions of his CIO adherents have very personal reasons for knowing Roosevelt has done something about the depression, and that that reason is motivated by the fact of a more comfortable bread basket.

With his own peculiar brand of illogic, Lewis concludes this country was on its way out of the depression in 1932 under policies Hoover pursued in co-operation with other nations. The policies, perhaps, that led to the moral and spiritual bankruptcy of Europe? "On the way out" via the closed and closing banks of 1932? "On the way out" by way of the bread lines of 1932, by way of the apple sellers of 1932, by way of the collapsed farm markets, by way of the fired camps of former soldiers and by way of "No Help Wanted" signs? It must be presumed also he thinks labor has made no gains in the last seven years.

It is impossible to know what animates the bitter hatred of John L. Lewis for Franklin D. Roosevelt. From the attitude of other CIO chieftains—men as popular and as able as Lewis—it is evident it is a personal hatred, bitter enough to turn Lewis, of all people, back into the camp of Herbert Hoover, into the camp of the man who above all represents big business in the form Lewis professes to hate.

It is fairly evident it is, at least partially, a case of desire for power frustrated by the fact that President Roosevelt has attempted to maintain some balance between the grasping of Lewis and the realities of the country's needs.

Several months ago Lewis was warning that he would place another candidate in the field if the major parties did not nominate a man suitable to him. Now he goes out of his way to absolve Herbert Hoover of all responsibility for the depression—the man who sent businessmen home from the White House in the ever-darkening days with a complacent assurance that everything would be all right. Just what does Lewis want?

If the English can use old equipment, let them have it; but warn them that one of these fast wars can be lost while a recruit is buttoning the two halves of a pup tent.

Among the communities that aren't—we imagine—putting in for the Army-Navy game this fall is Dunkerque.

Looking over the fugitives in its hand, Britain may presently discover it holds a royal flush.

OUR ITALIAN CITIZENS
(From The Boston Herald.)

The statement of Captain Bertolini, Italian consular agent in New York, that Americans of Italian descent hope for the success of Mussolini in his latest adventure has had a reception that should open the eyes of doubters, and reassure those who see the fortunes of democracy bound up in the Allied cause. There is no more authoritative spokesman for his people than Charles Poletti, son of an immigrant stonecutter, and now Lieutenant-Governor of New York. His reply to Bertolini and his address to the alumni of a Vermont educational institution have the ring of the true metal.

"You," he says to Bertolini, "have no authority whatever to speak for Americans of Italian descent. Allow me to tell you that Americans of Italian descent stand ready, if called upon, to oppose the soldiers of Fascism as well as those of Nazism and Communism. . . . They approve of the statement made by President Roosevelt that Mussolini stabbed his neighbor in the back."

Other prominent Italo-Americans speak in the same strain as Mr. Poletti.

At the time of the March on Rome and the suppression of Communist outrage, Italians here, as in the mother country, welcomed Mussolini as a national deliverer. After he had fastened his grip on the government of his country, and revealed himself as the destroyer of liberty, enthusiasm for him waned at home; but his measures were too well taken to permit the voice of opposition to make itself heard. When he tried to extend the Fascist authority to Italians in this country, he met with a resistance he could not suppress so easily, and even before his latest infamy, disgust and disillusionment have grown. Fascism can no more thrive among Italians on American soil than among any other element. Its theory is repugnant to the genius of the race.

The sons of Italy have made splendid contributions to the upbuilding of an American society and the shaping of an American way of life. Anyone at all acquainted with them knows and admires their homely virtues, their unremitting industry, their cheerful neighborliness, their patience under hardship, their simple gratitude for assumed kindnesses. It is an unfortunate thing that some are disposed to judge them by the wrongdoing of individuals. Every racial element among us has its proportion of evil doers.

"Do not unjustly place other Americans under suspicion," said Lieutenant-Governor Poletti. That is something to bear in mind these days and in perhaps more trying days to come. Let us continue to judge others by their deeds and not by their affiliations.

THE CAPITAL PARADE

By JOSEPH ALSOP AND ROBERT KINTNER.

WAR AT OUR FRONT DOOR

WASHINGTON, June 19.—As a consequence of the French surrender, and the possibility of the French fleet falling into German hands, the President is studying at least two emergency actions. Because of the obviously increased dangers to this country, many of his closest advisers are urging a proclamation of complete emergency to speed up rearmament. But the President, up to now at least, has been reluctant to use an old World War statute permitting this, since the proclamation necessitates a statement of the "imminence of war."

However, some emergency action is confidently forecast by persons in close contact with the White House, who believe the President will act along these lines:

First, a request to congress for practically unlimited authorizations (as distinguished from appropriations). Secondly, an extremely influential member of the new national defense committee have made this suggestion, basing it on the belief that without extremely large additional commitments to industry rebuilding our armed forces will be tragically delayed.

Second, adoption of a more drastic plan to tie together the economies of North and South America and thus forestall Nazi economic dominance to the south. The administration is studying a plan for huge purchases by this country of South American goods, purchases that may total as much as $1,000,000,000 a year, a means of heading off German trade and strengthening such countries as Argentina, Brazil and Uruguay against Nazi inroads.

NAZI SEA POWER

It is perfectly obvious that the French surrender has increased the danger to this country a thousand-fold. What army and navy officials fear is the capitulation of the French fleet, as a result of a Hitler threat to devastate France in the manner of Poland unless her ships are turned over into the hands of the British. It would make extremely difficult, if not impossible, continuance of the effective sea blockade of German and Italian territories.

A German-Italian-French fleet would physically outnumber the British, and while Great Britain might maintain superiority in larger ships, the advantage of the co-ordinated air forces of the dictators would offset this advantage. Even taking into account the difficulty the Germans would have in manning and supplying the French ships and the danger to this country in the German and Italian navies, the danger to this country is great. The British fleet, on the premise that the British fleet can control the Atlantic. If the British fleet can no longer be counted on, as many experts believe, this country will be forced to an immediate reappraisal of its strategic position.

Officials here are naturally hopeful that, since the French fleet was placed under the British high command at the beginning of the war, preparations have been made to prevent its surrender. But they are not completely confident that the disaster can be avoided.

Then, too, the French surrender once again brings the war to our front door, as there are six French possessions in this hemisphere: St. Pierre and Miquelon, islands off Newfoundland; Guadeloupe and Martinique, islands in the West Indies, and French Guiana and Inini, territories in South America. Germany is, of course, not expected to grab these minor possessions, but the mere listing of them may give a forecast of the future.

ONE BOTTLENECK

The real bottleneck in this country's defense program, according to informed opinion, lies in the inability of the government to make really extensive commitments. This is the reason why the President will probably ask congress for power to make practically unlimited authorizations. For three weeks William S. Knudsen and other industrial experts have been studying our defense needs. They have called in scores of manufacturers. All have been perfectly willing to fill government orders and to re-equip their plants for armament purposes. But without exception, it is said, the businessmen want more authorizations than can be given.

This is said to be true even though the national defense committee is blueprinting this country's defense needs at figures far below army estimates. Knudsen and his colleagues are trying to obtain full equipment for 1,000,000 men in a period of one year, or for 1,500,000 men in 18 months. Yet the highest War Department officials speak of the necessity of a regular army of 750,000 with a fully equipped and trained reserve of 2,500,000 men.

It is becoming more and more apparent that the administration has yet to deal adequately with two pressing problems: one of national defense and the other of preventing South America from coming under German economic influence. These two problems certainly seem important enough for congress to stay in session.

Night Baseball.

Personally, I prefer my baseball at night, under the lights. There is less strain on the eyes, I find, than in watching a game under the bright sun. I saw a Georgia afternoon. My only complaint about night baseball is that too high a proportion of the audience is apt to be of the shriller sex. Soprano yells on all sides are distracting and irritating, especially when, as is generally the case, they are inspired by nothing more exciting than an easy fly to the outfield.

Of course, the fact that you can take your own women folk, who are naturally not so crude in their misplaced enthusiasm as other women, is an advantage to these ladies' night games. Perhaps it works out even.

I do wish, however, that Earl Mann, Paul Richards and all their confreres would arrange for all games to follow the model of that played last Monday night. That was ideal baseball.

The home team trailing through the greater part of the game. Near resignation to what seemed a lost cause. Then a sudden resurgence of our brave heroes until they tied, and passed, by one run, the wreathed representative of Little Rock. Another run for L. R. trying the game again. Then, in the last half of the ninth, one down, a man on second and Charlie Glock, Cracker second baseman, hits a screamer deep into center field that sent the winning run across the home plate.

I wish the Southern League would adopt rules requiring the Crackers to win, say nine out of ten (we won't be hogish) of home games and all in the ninth inning. It is much more exciting, for instance, than that miserable affair of Sunday afternoon. Little Rock won, 8 to 0. Pah!

Charlie, Hero And Numbskull.

For eight innings Monday night this Charlie Glock was the objective of most of the disgust and criticism the grandstand about midway between third and home. This Glock is a good little fielder and a fair hitter, but he has an alarming enthusiasm that impels him to try and catch every fly that falls anywhere in normal territory of short, first base, center field and right field. I don't know why he ignores left field. Maybe he doesn't and I've just overlooked some of his activity.

The inevitable result is that he confuses other fielders. They never know, whenever they run to catch a fly, they won't bump into the Glock.

Last night at least one fly fell safely between three or four converging fielders which might have been caught if Glock hadn't been trying so hard to play three or four positions at once.

And the bass-voiced critic behind me was imploring Richards to attach a weight or two to Glock to sort of anchor him around second base.

Then, however, came the ninth! Glock had gone hitless for four times at bat. Marshall was on second, after a single and a sacrifice. And Charlie dug his toes into the dirt, swung beautifully and the most lovely ball of the evening sailed over the heads and midways between a couple of frantic Little Rock outfielders, who never had a chance to touch it. The game was won! Wow! Ain't that Glock kid the best second baseman the Crackers ever had? You tell 'em, boy!

Indigestion Inevitable.

I know that the ladies in the party which occupied the seats to our right suffered from indigestion Tuesday morning. There were three of them. I think, with one man who seemed to be willing to go to any financial outlay to satisfy their desires and give 'em a good time, basically as well as gastronomically.

I think they were consuming more or less edibles, or drinking that stuff in bottles which is alleged to refresh, all through the game. A score-card on their combined consumption would have been more complicated than any on the game.

Popcorn, peanuts, ice cream, hot dogs, and repeat the menu, please. For each one of them. With copious draughts of the drink that refreshed between.

One, even, found she was out of cigarettes and the poor scud—pardon, I mean the escort—dug down for a couple of dimes to replenish the fair one's stock.

Oh, well. Maybe he enjoyed it. But when, expressed shrill displeasure when she discovered what she had thought was sauerkraut on her dog was actually sliced onion.

Let's Go, Another Game.

Let's go to the game this afternoon? What say? Sure, it's a daylight game, but there won't be many women there and, who can tell, perhaps it'll be another ninth-inning victory—for the Crackers, of course.

Twenty-Five Years Ago Today.

From the news columns of Sunday, June 20, 1915:

"LONDON, June 19.—With the fall of Grodek, the Austro-Germans are within 17 miles of Lemberg, capital of Galicia. They have captured Lemberg, 20 miles southwest of Lemberg, and also have crossed the Tanew river."

And Fifty Years Ago.

From the news columns of Friday, June 20, 1890:

"The board of health has arranged to have the water of such wells in the city as their owners are doubtful of analyzed by Mr. John M. McCandless, consulting chemist of the State Agricultural Department. The fee will be $5."

GEORGIAN OFFERS LAND TO USE FOR NATION

Editor Constitution: I would like to transmit through you to my government the offer for the use of two tracts of land, free of any rent, to do with as they see fit.

These tracts of land contain 86 and 50 acres, respectively, with plenty of pine timber on each tract. These tracts of land are on highway No. 72 from Jackson to Covington, and are free of any debt.

Just an offer to help my government prepare.

EAGLE SCOUT DOES HIS PART FOR FRANCE

Editor Constitution: While listening on my short-wave radio, I was tuned in on Paris and heard the news commentator speaking English, and one of his bulletins had the substance as follows:

"There were many acts of heroism recorded by the French army in fighting the invader, but one of the citations for bravery was outstanding. Lieutenant L., an Eagle Scout, was in command of a French tank, and only a youngster of about 19. While in action his tank was disabled and mechanic badly wounded. In the midst of a hail of enemy machine-gun fire this youngster, with his wounded mechanic on his back, eluded an enemy patrol, waded in a stream with water up to his neck nearly all day, hiding from the enemy behind trees and bushes, finally making his way back to French lines."

"His fellow officers were in a canteen, bemoaning his loss, when this youngster, grimy, grumpy and dirty, and saluted smartly, as if nothing really serious had happened."

HITLER AND LINDBERGH TALK IN SAME VEIN

Editor Constitution: I notice striking similarities in the Lindbergh radio speech and the Hitler interview given Von Wiegand.

They were released simultaneously. Neither made any distinction in totalitarian governments and democracies. Both hold out the idea that peoples of the western hemisphere, particularly people of the United States, should not be concerned in the least over the outbreak of the war which Germany is waging against European democracies. Both warn the United States that no character or quantity of military supplies which we might send will help France or England. Both are designed to impress the United States that Hitler's war machine is unbeatable. Neither is satisfied with Mr. Roosevelt's foreign policy.

Both assure that Hitler has no designs in the western hemisphere. (Mr. Roosevelt said this brought up recollections.) Both assure that Hitler's word is good. Hitler referred to the "fifth column" as mythical; Lindbergh ignored it. They are mutually supporting, and either might well have followed the other for propaganda purposes.

Lindbergh's caustic criticism of the Roosevelt foreign policy might be limited to a service to the Republican party. However, it was Hitler and not the G. O. P., which decorated him with a Nazi medal and he has taken no steps to return it.

BRITISH NAVY TO WIN WAR WITH BLOCKADE

Editor Constitution: "Silhouettes" of June 18.

Too pessimistic for such times as these. The true history of this war is as plain as the nose on your face. Germany expected to destroy the English navy with the secret gadgets that they used. To win the war Germany would have to destroy the English navy. When Germany found this was impossible they commenced a land warfare. They are no better off than they were when they started. England's navy is stronger today than it was in September. Stronger in information since they know all the tricks Germany had up her sleeve.

When England entered the war she placed a strangling hold on Germany's esophagus. A hold that tightens with the passing of each month. And now with the assistance that has been offered to England by the United States that strangling hold will in time—and it may take a lot of time—eliminate the conquering ambition of the German government.

And that is the war news up to date.

The French navy will be scuttled or kept intact by the British.

ONE WORD MORE

By RALPH MCGILL.

THE INDIAN MARKET

MEXICO CITY, D. F., June 15.—(By Air Mail.)—It is only 40 miles to Toluca, Mexico, from Mexico City and it is a great place for a philosopher.

A philosopher concerned with the theory or the problem of happiness would take this ride on Friday, because that is the day of the Indian market in Toluca.

There are two beasts of burden in Mexico, the burro and the Mexican Indian. Along the road to Toluca on the day of the market you will meet many Indians. They will be trotting along with tremendous loads of pottery, mats or baskets on their backs. They will be trotting. They are going the 40 miles to Mexico City to be there for the big Saturday and Sunday market back of the National Palace.

You will notice many of them are women. Their faces are the not-always-so-inscrutable faces, but beneath their burdens they will seem sad. They will be carrying the burden with a strap across the forehead.

They travel 40 miles on foot, sell their goods for a few pesos, and trot the 40 miles back, a journey of 80 miles. Often they will load themselves down with some deadweight on the return journey so they will not feel the difference.

The peso is worth about 18 cents. They will travel the 80 miles and receive for their goods not as much as will be spent for a round of drinks at one of the large tables in any one of the cocktail bars.

This causes the amateur philosopher some acute pain, and some of the philosophers, holding a two-peso Scotch and soda in their hands, have been known to put them down and walk out on the afternoon of the journey to the market in Toluca.

One of the amateur philosophers got out of his car, paid one of the women, loaded with a burden of clay pots, to pose for a picture. He photographed her trotting along the road. This picture he intends to have enlarged and presented to his wife on the next first of the month. He admits it is a futile gesture, but he is stubborn. It is a way with philosophers.

CRAFTS SURVIVE

The crafts still survive in Mexico, but they are having a difficult time. The machines of New Jersey send in some woven serapes and blankets. They are gaily colored and are cheap. They have flamboyant colors and queer designs, fashioned by the Indians of the textile mills in the eastern section of the United States.

The tourists seem to buy on the idea that the more color and queer design they can buy in a blanket, the more Mexican it will appear. They never look at the blankets folded over the shoulders of the Mexicans they see walking or trotting or leaning along the roads. These are never loud but are quiet, hand-woven blankets, or serapes.

There is a campaign to educate the tourist to the value of real blankets and real handicrafts. It is having a difficult time because too many tourists want something cheap and "foreign" looking. When they get it back home it will look cheap, while a real piece of handicraft never does.

The clay pottery, too, is having some difficulty because machines can turn it out in mass production. The Indian who works a month on a set of pottery has to compete with it and it is discouraging. Nevertheless, the crafts survive.

THE DESERT OF THE LIONS

Coming back from Toluca, we came back through the Desert of the Lions. It is not a desert at all and there are no lions. Alfredo thought perhaps there may have been lions in the mountains, but tradition has it the place was named for an old monastery which, in ruins, is to be found in the mountains. It was a "desierto," or religious retreat.

At the roadside near the old ruins, which date back to 1606, there is a row of Mexican eating places.

There we were waited on by Trinidad Rendon, who is, I am sure, the prettiest young girl in Mexico. She had her hair in pig-tails and a smile worth going far to see.

There we had fried potatoes and cold chicken; there we had new tortillas and hot frijoles, which are fried beans. Rolled, Mexican style, in the thin corn-cake tortillas, well seasoned with fresh, green chiles, they are good eating. I cannot imagine a southerner not liking the tortillas. They are too much like a hockecake not to be good.

There I learned to squeeze lime juice into a cup of hot black coffee, and discover a new and excellent flavor.

There were barefooted Indians about; the kitchens were crude pieces of iron over charcoal; the mountains of spruce and pine towered above us. But there it was possible to get that well-known soft drink, cold and good. And there, too, one could buy a well-known ginger ale.

The walls of the old monastery, built in 1606 and abandoned during the revolution of 1810, stand. The gardens have been re-established by the horde of Indians, men and women, who wish to guide you through the ruins. The old cells of the monks are there; the underground passages are there; some lovely old windows and one magnificent dome remain. The rest is silence. Some of the old walls, the dome, the spruce trees, Trinidad and her fried potatoes and boiled coffee with lime juice, make it worth seeing.

The Strong Have No Protection Against Enemies They Cannot See

By ROBERT QUILLEN

by Dudley Glass

Old-Timers.

Many of the letters which have come to me or to the publisher of this newspaper say: "We have taken The Constitution for more than 50 years."

That's a long time, folks. It indicates two generations—maybe three or four—of readers.

I appreciate these veteran subscribers welcoming me into the fold. But I wouldn't be human if I didn't appreciate even more the writers who say they are "just starting" this paper because they had missed my old column and were happy to see it again.

I also am an old Constitution subscriber. As city editor, away back yonder, of an afternoon newspaper, it was necessary for me to know what had happened in town overnight. So 6 a. m. found me digging through The Constitution at home. I acquired the habit more than 30 years ago and was never able to shake it off.

The morning newspaper habit, I think, really is a "habit," like coffee or a shave. Even if The Constitution had not been half as good a newspaper as it was and is, I'd have wanted to see it. I'd have to go to town to discover, through street or office gossip, that something of extreme importance had occurred since I had gone home the afternoon before and I was in ignorance of it.

Which First?

Somewhere, in some newspaper, I ran across a controversy between contributors of Letters to the Editor over which came first—not the hen or the egg but the electric light or the automobile.

Sounded foolish to me. Because even away back in my boyhood days there were electric lights. Arc lamps in which two sticks of carbon, fed by a hot current, glowed high above the street. Incandescent lamps—the same you have all over your home now except that yours are brighter and last longer and cost less to buy and burn—were coming into use. I haven't the dates of the Edison invention at hand, but I think we celebrated a few years ago the fiftieth anniversary of the incandescent light.

I know I hadn't heard of the automobile then. Not many years afterward there was talk of the "horseless carriage." First one I ever saw was about 1897. An electric buggy—and built like a buggy—in the lobby of the old Read House in Chattanooga. I think that hostelry was burned years ago, to be replaced by a bigger and better one. It was several years after that before I took a ride in a gasoline-propelled automobile.

Of course, there were "horseless carriages" away back yonder. But not practical, for the internal combustion engine had not been invented. They were abandoned as mere toys.

I have plenty of reason to remember electric arc lamps as early as 1896. Because I rode a bicycle around the town of Cleveland, Tenn., and "trimmed" the lamps, putting in new carbons, washing the bugs out of the big globes. And once, high on top of the courthouse, I got a shock that laid me out, cold, for 10 minutes or more. But I hadn't heard of an automobile up to that time.

"By Hand."

Not so long ago I had detoured off the main highway over a fair dirt road to a pleasant little town where I stopped for gas.

An old Negro, shuffled down the street, exhibiting something to the white folk he met. They read, made comments to the old man and to one another and passed on.

It was a notice, written by pen in a beautiful script, that one of the elder citizens had passed to the beyond, that his funeral would be held the following day at the home, and the reader was invited to attend.

No newspaper in that pleasant little town. Not even a weekly. The notice, passed around town by the old messenger, was traditional.

I wondered how many such funeral announcements that old man had carried in his day. And whether, when his own time comes, some one will write, in beautiful script, the sad news that Uncle William has passed on. I bet somebody will—for there is no affection exceeding that of small town folk for a good old Negro "uncle" or "mammy" who has grown old along with the trees which line the main street and the decrepit hotel with its wide veranda which used to house the "drummers" before the automobile brought a bigger town only 30 minutes away.

The Nancy Hart.

New manager of the nice hotel in Hartwell, Ga., has changed its name to the "Nancy Hart," according to Louie Morris' Hartwell, Sun. He approves the idea and so do I.

Nancy Hart was a brave woman. A bearcat. She is, as far as I know, Georgia's only heroine of the Revolution. The county and town are named for her—and now the hotel.

It is told in history that when six Tories showed up at Nancy's cabin where Hartwell now stands she grabbed a gun and killed one and wounded another. When her husband and friends arrived, she had the others standing against the wall and begging. They were hanged because, she said, shooting was too good for them.

Aid to Children, Farms Studied By Kiwanians

Organization's National Conclave Told of Georgia Program.

MINNEAPOLIS, June 19.—(AP) The agricultural and child welfare programs of the Kiwanis clubs in Georgia were studied by delegates attending the 24th annual convention of Kiwanis here today.

For the next year, the Georgia Kiwanis farm activities will include diversified farming experiments, promotion of purebred stock raising, supervision of 4-H Club and Future Farmers of America activities, sponsorship of county fairs, and financial aid to rural youth, both in experimental projects and in vocational agriculture.

Identified with the farm work are Lester C. Anderson, of Metter, chairman of the Georgia Kiwanis committee on agriculture; J. L. Worthen, of Vidalia; Thomas Cordell, of Quitman; Quillian L. Bryant, of Louisville, and S. B. Adair, of Thomaston.

An equally ambitious program in the child welfare field will be directed by the committee of James M. Feagle, of Athens; George Geisse, of Atlanta; Pembroke Pope, of Washington; Charles H. Powell, of Moultrie, and William S. Jones, of Rockmart.

This work will embrace 53 Georgia communities, including clinics, hospitalization, preventorium, health camps and the furnishing of food and clothing. Georgia District Governor George E. Simpson, of Valdosta, reported the enlistment of schools, churches and homes to co-operate.

Good Morning—By Louie D. Newton

In the May 31 issue of The Young Catholic Messenger appears a story of the closing day's lesson in St. Martin's school, in which Father Daniels asks the graduating class to tell him what has been the most important lesson they have learned in the school.

"Honesty," a dozen voices answered. "Justice," one boy answered. "Arithmetic," another answered. "How to get along together," one boy answered.

"I can see why they elected you class president, William," Father Daniels laughed. "I mean, Father," put in William, "by respecting the rights of other people."

"Now you've said it," Father Daniels declared. "For, while boys and girls must have honesty and justice and charity in their souls, they must learn to use them for the good of everyone. Knowledge of your own rights and respect for the other fellow's rights are the foundation stones of good citizenship."

The comment of the wise teacher at St. Martin's brings to mind the words of the Great Teacher regarding true liberty:

"Ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free. . . . If the Son therefore shall make you free, ye shall be free indeed. . . . Therefore all things whatsoever ye would that men should do to you, do ye even so to them; for this is the law and the prophets."

Respect for the rights of others is not a matter of tolerance, as so many insist. There is a wide difference between toleration and liberty. Toleration implies that somebody claims the right to tolerate. Toleration is a concession, while liberty is a right. Toleration is a matter of expediency. Liberty is a matter of principle.

Toleration is a gift from man. Liberty is a gift from God. We do well to remember in these stressful days that "knowledge of your own rights and respect for the other fellow's rights are the foundation stones of good citizenship." I believe it is the only citizenship which has ever stood up under the attacks of autocracy and totalitarianism. Let us give thanks anew that our fathers sought to establish here a government in which such a conception of citizenship might have its rightful way in the minds of any and all who desire to live in a true democracy. Which should remind us to ever be alert to fulfill these high demands in our own lives and to challenge any who may seek to destroy this cherished principle of true liberty.

Group, Fearing Crash, Wants Tobacco Control

RALEIGH, N. C., June 19.—(AP) Warned of possible rock-bottom tobacco prices if farmers reject leaf control, 200 warehousemen, bankers, merchants and growers went on record here in favor of a three-year curtailment program.

J. B. Hutson, assistant AAA administrator, told the group yesterday the tobacco situation was the darkest in the history of the crop and asserted only a program of controlled production would keep prices from touching rock bottom.

Theaters Offer Films on Nazis, Other Thrillers

Atlanta Screens Present Wide Variety; One Movie Held Over.

By LEE ROGERS, Motion Picture Editor.

Three films which can trace their origin to the Nazi uprising in Europe will open on Atlanta screens today and tomorrow. They are "The Mortal Storm," with James Stewart, and Margaret Sullivan, at Loew's; "Four Sons," with Don Ameche, at the Paramount; and "Enemy Agent" at the Capitol.

Other new offerings will be "The Lone Wolf Meets the Lady," at the Rialto, and Edward G. Robinson in "Brother Orchid," at the Fox. The Roxy is continuing "Virginia City."

Grand.

A story of the rise of Nazi power in Germany, "The Mortal Storm," opens tomorrow at Loew's Grand with James Stewart and Margaret Sullivan again united as the lovers involved.

Others in the cast of this powerful film are Robert Young and Frank Morgan.

The story concerns friends, professors and families who find themselves divided over the merits of the Nazi system and the consequent misfortunes.

Paramount.

"Four Sons," one of the season's frankest films, concerns the adventures of a family whose serene existence is shattered when it splits over Nazi politics.

Heading the cast are Don Ameche, Eugenia Leontovich and Alan Curtis.

Advance reports indicate that one of the best performances thus far on the screen this year is turned in by Eugenia Leontovich as the mother who watches her family turn to brother fighting against brother.

activities in the United States and prevent theft of vital military plane designs from aircraft factories, "Enemy Agent" opens today for three days at the Capitol theater.

In the cast of this action film are Richard Cromwell, Helen Vinson, Robert Armstrong and Jack LaRue.

Rhodes.

Lana Turner and Jean Blondell fight for the love of George Murphy in "Two Girls on Broadway," opening tomorrow at the Rhodes theater. It is a first-run picture.

The story concerns the life of two girls trying to make their way on Broadway.

Fox.

Edward G. Robinson returns to the comic gangster variety of film which was so good in "A Slight Case of Murder" and "The Amazing Dr. Clitterhouse" when "Brother Orchid" arrives at the Fox theater tomorrow.

The story, written almost exclusively in laugh lines, concerns a gangster who wishes to retire and absorb some culture. He does so, only to find himself fleeced out of his ill-gotten gains by his cultured pals. Returning he attempts to muscle back in as head of his old gang, but Humphrey Bogart does not like the idea and puts the gangster in a monastery and there in a surprise ending, and amidst gang bullets, he finds his culture.

Also in the cast are Ann Southern and Ralph Bellamy.

Roxy.

"Virginia City," in which Bainbridge's Miriam Hopkins plays a southern spy in a role pitted against Errol Flynn, a northern spy, is playing currently at the Roxy theater.

Randolph Scott adds action and a rival love interest in this story of War Between the States days on the western frontier. It's packed full of action in the western variety.

Cameo.

"Rocky Mountain Rangers" plays at the Cameo theater tomorrow and Saturday. The Three Mesquites—Bob Livingston, Raymond Hatton and Duncan Renaldo—are featured.

Rialto.

"The Lone Wolf Meets the Lady" opens a week's engagement at the Rialto theater tomorrow with Warren William and Jean Muir in the title roles.

This is the most recent of the screen thrillers based upon the famous fiction character created by Louis Joseph Vance. In this film, the Lone Wolf goes to the bottom of a river to save the reputation of an innocent woman. Also in the cast are Roger Pryor, Warren Hull, Victor Jory and Thurston Hall.

Kiddie Revue.

The final showings of the twelfth annual Atlanta Kiddie Revue for the benefit of the milk fund of the Scottish Rite Hospital for Crippled Children will be presented today on the stage at Loew's Grand theater.

Approximately 117 talented Atlanta boys and girls dance, sing and play to entertain the audience and in so doing earn money with which milk can be bought throughout next year for the children confined to the hospital. The program is sponsored by the Atlanta Masonic Club.

LOOKS OKAY—These representatives of the governments of Fulton county and the city of Atlanta yesterday looked approvingly at the 50-acre tract of land in Sylvan Hills section which will be turned into Perkerson Park, the development to begin within the next two weeks.

Perkerson Park Development To Start Soon

Officials, Civic Leaders Inspect Newly Acquired Site.

Civic leaders and officials of Atlanta and Fulton county yesterday inspected the 50-acre Perkerson park in the Sylvan Hills section of the municipality preparatory to starting development of the newly-acquired tract within the next two weeks.

Troy G. Chastain, chairman of the parks committee of the Fulton county commission; Dr. Charles R. Adams, committee member; Councilman C. M. (Mac) Bolen, of the fourth ward; George Wilson, member of a civic improvement committee of the West End Business Men's Association, and Sid Truitt, Fulton county agricultural agent, were among those joining in the preliminary studies incident to start of work.

Chastain predicted that picnic grills, playgrounds, and other recreational facilities will be ready for public enjoyment by early fall. The tract runs 1,273 feet along Dekker avenue, extending from Beatie to Fairbank streets, and extends southward 1,711 feet. It is beautifully wooded hills and valleys and is ideally adapted for park use, Bolen said.

City council provided funds for the purchase of the site from the Perkerson heirs, and Bolen yesterday said it will be named Perkerson park because of the generosity of owners in making a price for the valuable area within reach of the municipality.

Showers checked the steadily rising mercury at 88 yesterday. The morning's low was 72.

City's New Asphalt Plant To Start Next Week

Operation of the newly installed city asphalt plant, with a capacity of 100 tons daily, the first owned by the municipality since 1932, will begin next week, it was announced yesterday by Clarke Donaldson. The cost is approximately $11,000.

The old plant was destroyed by fire in 1934, but was taken out of operation in 1932 because of need of economies.

Senate Passes War Tax Bill For 8 Billion

would go into effect along with the higher income and excise taxes provided by the bill to finance defense expenditures, was adopted by a surprise vote of 41 to 31.

Under the Connally amendment, the normal income tax rate for individuals would be increased from 4 to 10 per cent. Additional surtaxes would start at 6 per cent on net income between $1,000 and $2,000 and would range upward to 80 per cent on net income in excess of $50,000.

The measure would impose a normal tax of 22 per cent on corporation net income in excess of $25,000. Additional surtaxes on excess corporate income would start at 10 per cent on profits amounting to less than 10 per cent of a corporation's invested capital. A maximum surtax of 60 per cent would be imposed on profits exceeding 25 per cent of invested capital.

This was developed on the theory that the country would be able to operate if we ever go to war," Connally said. "It was worked out by experts from the treasury, the legislative counsel, and other experts."

Americans Willing. Connally added that the "people of this country are willing to pay now to pay as we go. They are not going to be deluded by any peanut politics this year."

After quoting briefly from the voluminous 329-page amendment, Connally shouted that the "treasury says this can work, the treasury says they can administer it, they say it will not be destructive."

Admitting that the rates were steep, Connally commented that the bill "milks the old cow down to the point of exhaustion, but it doesn't quite put her out of business."

Few of the tired lawmakers were familiar with the detailed bill but Byrd remarked that one section conferred unlimited powers to the President and certain wartime agencies to take property "or anything else."

Strikes 20 Pages. Connally promptly agreed to strike all these provisions from the bill. He eliminated nearly 20 pages of text, after explaining that these had been inserted by the senate military affairs committee.

Just before final passage, with senators shouting "Vote, vote, vote," Senator Danaher, Republican, Connecticut, obtained approval of an amendment exempting state employees paid in part with federal funds from federal income taxes prior to January 1, 1939.

Earlier the senate had shouted down a nearly identical amendment. Danaher said a recent supreme court decision and later act of congress had subjected these state employees to unjust retroactive taxes and that the internal revenue bureau was seeking to collect them with penalties and interest.

In a day replete with defense preparations, these other developments occurred:

1. Chairman Vinson, Democrat, Georgia, of the house naval committee, announced that President Roosevelt favored the new $4,000,000,000 naval expansion legislation. After the house rules committee had paved the way for consideration of the measure tomorrow, Representative Rayburn, Democrat, Texas, the Democratic leader, said it might not be considered for some time.

Radio Hams Notified. 2. The Federal Communications Commission ordered 100,000 commercial and amateur radio operators to prove that they are United States citizens.

3. The senate appropriations committee approved a $1,777,489,788 emergency defense bill carrying appropriations for various types of arms and other fighting equipment.

4. Louis Johnson, assistant secretary of war, announced reorganization of the Army Industrial College to triple its training of officers in methods of mobilizing industry for defense. The school will function all year with three four-month courses, instead of nine months with a single course.

5. The War Department, through Major Cyrus Q. Shelton, of the army's general staff, contended that formation of a "home defense force" would hamper preparation of a "first line defense." Shelton testified before the house military committee in opposition to a bill by Representative Anderson, Democrat, Missouri, creating a defense force, which would be composed of...

MANY NEVER SUSPECT CAUSE OF BACKACHES

This Old Treatment Often Brings Happy Relief

Many sufferers relieve nagging backache quickly, once they discover that the real cause of their trouble may be tired kidneys. The kidneys are Nature's chief way of taking the excess acids and waste out of the blood. They help most people pass about 3 pints a day. When disorder of kidney function permits poisonous matter to remain in your blood, it may cause nagging backache, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness. Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning sometimes shows there is something wrong with your kidneys or bladder. Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 10 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from your blood. Get Doan's Pills.

AMERICAN TORPEDO BOATS SPEED TO ENGLAND

—Twenty of these fast boats have been released to the British, it was revealed yesterday. Originally ordered for the U. S. navy, the PT-9 is a fast craft (more than 50 miles an hour under full military load), carries four torpedoes, four machineguns and a smoke screen outfit.

It can be equipped with depth bombs on short notice and is fatal to submarines. These light ships are capable of silent dashes against the enemy and can do much of the reconnaissance work now done by destroyers. Shallow enough to enter a creek, these "skeeters" can go out and sink a battleship.

WICHITA, Kan., June 19.—(AP) Mrs. Gerald B. Winrod obtained an emergency divorce today from the Wichita publisher and lecturer, whom she had accused at an earlier hearing of pro-Nazi and revolutionary activities.

The decree followed a hearing on a separate maintenance suit, in which the Rev. Mr. Winrod agreed to a $5,000 cash settlement and monthly payments of $45 for the support of their three children.

Mrs. Winrod testified her husband expected to be "nominal head of the country when the revolution comes." Mr. Winrod denied he was a Nazi or "pro-Nazi."

Edison Says He Sought Big Navy After Munich

JERSEY CITY, N. J., June 19.—(AP)—Secretary of the Navy Edison disclosed today that after appeasement at Munich in September, 1938, he recommended a five-billion-dollar expenditure for expansion of the United States navy, "but it was apparently decided that the country was not yet ready for that."

Asked whether he believed the United States would be involved in the war, Edison replied: "I do not think we will have a thing to say about it. It will be imposed upon us."

End of Democracy Is Seen for Europe

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va., June 19.—(AP)—Democracy in Europe is doomed, even if England is able to defeat Germany. R. H. Markham, foreign writer and special writer for the Christian Science Monitor, told the Institute of Public Affairs at the University of Virginia tonight.

"It seems quite certain that one of two things will now happen," he said. "First, Hitler may triumph. . . . In that case, democracy will be as a torpedoed ship, physically annihilated."

"Perhaps England will hold the fort. . . . In that case, the war might drag on, as during Napoleon's era. Under such circumstances, England will fight with a fanatical fury and the British people, in their desire for elemental self-preservation, will forego all democratic forms. They will devote all their energies to fighting and making implements of war. So, in that case, also, democracy will be dead in Europe."

Dempsey Fighting Luttrell Held Like Paderewski in Vaudeville

Old Punches Must Be Muddling Mauler's Brains, Writer Laments, Plaintively Protesting Loss of Former Champ's Remaining Glamor.

By HAROLD MARTIN.

It will do no good to squawk, for the world is full of suckers who like to be fooled, but in behalf of the legions now approaching their thirties who as youngsters in pantaloons worshipped the old Manassa Mauler, we'd like to lift one plaintive protest at the uninspiring spectacle of Jack Dempsey fighting a large hunk of western beef named "Cowboy" Luttrell.

The bout is scheduled for July 1 at Ponce de Leon park, and unless fate or an injunction intervenes, it will probably go as planned.

It must be that old punches are just now beginning to muddle the Dempsey brain. Senility is probably setting in early. The old boy is probably hearing bells ringing again. He is in the position of the oldster who sits in the sun mumbling about the time when he could lift a bale of cotton—the octogenarian soldier who points with his walking stick and goes "bing, bing, bing" to show how he mowed 'em down at Bull Run.

The only trouble with Dempsey is, everybody knows he was good. They were there and they saw him, or they read about it in the papers. And now he's got to prove that he's still good by getting in the ring with a large, damp, odoriferous individual named Luttrell, who has already phoned up the fight by announcing he'll probably have to agree to take a dive, but that he will doublecross everybody by going in to win.

Dempsey himself further highlights the ineptitude of the whole thing by announcing he can't go ten rounds, so let's make it six. Why not make it five? Or one? Why not call it off altogether?

Dempsey probably doesn't realize the prestige he's enjoyed since he beat Willard and went on from there to beat everybody who lifted a fist against him until Tunney came along. There is a generation to whom he is still the champion. They are about getting into their early thirties now. They were at the stage when hero worshiping was the most acute when his star was blazing brightest. They aped his dark and beaming brow as best they could. If they were blond and freckled, with white eyebrows, they tried to make a scowl suffice. The thin-legged ones among them defended their skininess by quoting a famous sports writer's words that Dempsey himself got set for his punches on pins as "thin and withered as an old woman's."

The old hero kept this aura long after he went into the restaurant business, though his sideline trade of refereeing wrestling did not enhance it any. It was not particularly edifying to see the old man tugging and pawing at two sweaty behemoths, when many who witnessed this could remember the days when he could have made both of the groaners climb the sides of the stadium.

It persisted, though, and even in recent years his arrival in a town could cause a stir of excitement akin to that of one Cocky Sobel, who awoke Atlanta sports writers in the middle of the night once to announce in breathless, awe-struck tones that:

"Jack Dempsey just got into town in two Lincoln Zeefers."

The point we are struggling to make is this: The old Mauler is doing himself a great disservice by thus destroying all that remains of the glamor he used to have. Dempsey fighting Luttrell is comparable to Paderewski touring in vaudeville, or Michelangelo contracting to paint pal-killer ads on the sides of barns.

If he whips the Cowboy, so what? Who'll dance in the streets? If he loses—well, it'll be a sad thing for the generations who remembered him when. They've been dining into the ears of their own offspring these stories of the lean brown panther-man who felled Willard, slaughtered Firpo, annihilated Gorgeous Georges Carpentier, the Orchid Man, and lost to Tunney only by the long count.

What will they say when the small fry peer into the ring at a Dempsey with a roll of sweat about his waist and inquire:

"Is that the man you've been talking about? When was he a lean brown panther-man, Pop?" It won't help the fight game any either. A lot of youngsters now coming along still are impressed by the Dempsey legend and might try to emulate him. They couldn't adopt Tunney as a hero because they didn't want to have to spout Shakespeare between uppercuts.

Baer was a clown and Primo Carnera, the Leaning Tower of Gorgonzola, was an object more of pity than of admiration. Braddock lacked color and Schmeling was not a heroic figure. Joe Louis has his hero worshipers, but they number few white hopes among them.

Dempsey is the only one. The youngster seeking a hero has to go back down the line to him.

And now, fat and well past 40, he goes into the ring with a palooka named Luttrell, who couldn't have tied his shoestrings in the old days. It is sad to contemplate. It is sadder still to realize that there will be a lot of folks there to see it. Barnum was right. There's one born every minute. And when it comes to phony sports events, the rate of reproduction is infinitely faster.

The story is that when Firpo with a body punch lifted Dempsey out of the ring, the sports writers helped him back.

If it happens this time, just let him lie there, boys, among the cigar butts and the pop bottles and the shavings. And if a lady who got her training watching wrestling matches conks him on the skull with a high-heeled slipper, don't try to stop her.

He shouldn't have been there in the first place.

Georgians Get $50,000 Under Pay-Hour Law

Two-Year Restitution in This State and Florida Totals $155,000.

Restitution totaling $155,000 has been made to workers in Georgia and Florida since the fair labor standards act became effective less than two years ago. Dr. James G. Johnson, supervising inspector of the Atlanta region of the wage and hour division of the Department of Labor, reported yesterday.

The sum represents the difference in what was actually paid employees and what was due them under the law in consent decrees taken against 73 employers, Johnson said.

Restitutions were divided between 5,422 workers in the two states, 4,105 in Florida and 1,317 in Georgia. Georgians received $50,000 in money due them, while Floridians were paid $105,000. Florida's large total, Johnson explained, is due to the fact that one consent decree obtained there accounted for restitutions amounting to $75,000. In most cases, Johnson pointed out, violations were found to have been based on ignorance of the law, though there were some flagrant cases of falsification of records. That type is dealt with in criminal courts.

Latest restitution obtained by Johnson's office was for the employees of Gottesman & Co., brassiere manufacturers of 845 Spring street. United States District Judge E. Marvin Underwood signed an injunction Tuesday restraining the company from future violations of the act, and ordering the payment of back wages in the amount of $1,250.

Woodbury Hall's Sale Announced

Woodbury Hall, for many years one of the south's most fashionable schools for young women, has been bought by John C. and Rosa Lee Moar from the National Life Insurance Company for an undisclosed amount. The property, in Ansley Park, is assessed at $27,500.

The building is a two-story structure, now divided into a 12-unit apartment. It is located at 149 Peachtree circle. The 14 large pillars on the building were once a part of the old Loden residence at the northwest corner of Peachtree and Ellis streets, now the site of a large department store. General Sherman is said to have made his headquarters in the Loden house. H. W. DiCristina, of Haas & Dodd, handled the transaction.

LOS ALIADOS DISCUTEN Y LOS ALEMANES AVANZAN

AL PUBLICO
Como se prevenia desde ayer, ha sido necesario cambiar el nombre de nuestro periódico. Desde esta fecha el "DIARIO ALEMAN" se llamará "DIARIO DE LA GUERRA".

NAZI NEWSPAPER SPEAKS SPANISH—and, as long as it can put in a plug for the Fatherland, it doesn't seem to make any difference what the paper is named. Before Arthur Dietrich, Germany's chief propagandist in Mexico, was expelled, he was publisher of a newspaper, "Diario Aleman" (German Daily), shown at top, which frankly was a Nazi propaganda sheet. Under pressure, he changed the newspaper's name to "Diario de la Guerra" (War Daily), as shown in middle picture and ran a page one box (bottom), announcing change in name.

years in Mexico. All who know him say he is a dynamo of energy. He has been away for visits to Berlin and for his stay in Spain where he helped organize, within Madrid, the first of the world's "Fifth Columns," and the one which was to give its name to this type of internal betrayal of a nation.

During his dozen years he has carried on various organizations. Mexico, used to the presence of agents of all nations, did not pay much attention to any of them.

When the United States and Mexico became concerned about publicity of the fifth column activities, investigation was begun. Some of the amazing developments cannot be published yet. Investigation still is going on. There will be announcements within the near future, perhaps the immediate future.

Dietrich was spending about $30,000 per month on propaganda alone. Much of that expenditure could be seen by any who chose to look.

In the first place he organized a magazine. It is well-gotten up, filled with pictures and stories about Germany. It extols German culture, her armies and her Fuehrer. It praised Mexico as a friend of Germany. It flattered many Mexicans.

He also established a newspaper which was called the "German Daily."

The magazine was circulated not only in Mexico but also in Central and South America. It was given away to thousands of Mexicans and to thousands in the countries to the south.

In Mexico, newspapers are mailed free. This was due to President Cardenas' desire to help dissipate illiteracy in his country.

The German newspaper, published of course in Spanish, was sent to thousands who never appeared on its circulation list.

This much expense could be seen on the streets. Dietrich, in 12 years, had done much more work. Germany was spending more money than all other nations combined. One of the many advantages a dictatorship has is that it can spend money and does not have to account for it.

The newspapers were Dietrich's sideline.

Marietta Plant U. S. Ceases Plans To Make Sending Ships Six-Inch Shells For Refugees

Glover Company Estimates It Could Turn Out 1,000 a Day.

The Glover Manufacturing Company plant at Marietta may be converted into a munitions producing concern, it was disclosed yesterday.

Plans for the conversion have been worked out by Boland Glover, head of the firm, and Major A. A. Case, superintendent of shops at Georgia Tech, who recently has completed specifications for construction of a 100-ton tank.

Under their plans, the concern would manufacture 155mm. six-inch shells. While no contracts have been signed, it was estimated that the cost of converting the plant into a munitions factory would be about $400,000 and the daily output would be 1,000 shells.

200 Refused To Sail on Washington, Called It 'Unsatisfactory.'

WASHINGTON, June 19. — (UP)—The State Department is considering modification of neutrality regulations to permit hundreds of Americans stranded in Great Britain and Ireland to return home on belligerent vessels, a source close to the department disclosed tonight.

The department, it was added, is determined not to risk any more American lives by sending United States rescue ships into the British war zone, primarily because the refugee liner Washington, on leaving Galway, Ireland, recently, had accommodations for 200 refugees who would not accept them because they presumably were not satisfactory.

The department, it was said, is under tremendous pressure from both refugees and their relatives here to send American flag ships into combat zones, or to order United States warships now in Portuguese waters to effect rescues.

A department spokesman pointed ed out that both the American embassy in London and the legation at Dublin, as well as consular offices in the British Isles, issued repeated warnings to Americans to flee before the outbreak of hostilities. He added that every assistance had been offered to them but that hundreds had declined to leave.

German Firms Offer Fall Deliveries in Brazil
RIO DE JANEIRO, June 19. — (AP)—Business circles reported tonight that some German firms have offered to accept orders for September delivery in Brazil, indicating a belief that the war may be ended by that time. Similar offers were said to have been made in Argentina, Chile and Peru.

Last week's MAY'S DRUG STORES startled all Atlanta by giving away, absolutely FREE—a full-size, regular $1.35 bottle of the New and Improved SARGON to former users of the old SARGON.

The week has hardly gone by when many recipients of the FREE bottle purchased their second bottle in order to complete their treatment—to regain their full strength and energy. In other instances many testified as to the value of SARGON, telling how SARGON helped them. In these cases the opinion of the majority is that the New and Improved SARGON does work wonders in bringing new energy, lustrous appetites, improved digestion and assimilation to the sick and ailing, and generally improves the nervous and physical condition of sufferers from deficiency ailments and inorganic troubles.

With this evidence of the need of a powerful, invigorating tonic like SARGON before us, we have arranged to make this amazing Low Price of a regular $1.35 bottle of SARGON for only 98 cents with the coupon. If you need a tonic—don't delay—

NOTE: This Low Price Offer is good only for Thursday, Friday and Saturday of this week—and only when presented to the drug clerk with the coupon at the top of this announcement. Try SARGON now and prove to yourself as SARGON has to others that it is now twice as good as the old SARGON.

In addition to its medicinal and tonic value, SARGON has a pleasing, wine-like taste and can be taken freely by all until desired results are obtained. SARGON's value is so pronounced, that if you don't get the utmost benefit from its use, the purchase price will be immediately refunded.

English Countryside Struck by German Bomb Raiders

MODERN RUINS were left in the wake of night-raiding Nazi bombers which soared over the English countryside, dealing death to 12 civilians, injury to 11 others, and widespread destruction. This, British sources said, is the way a Cambridgeshire village looked after the Germans' night-long visitation.

Census Heads Hope To Give Totals Sunday

Population Just Below 300,000 Is Expected for Atlanta.

Census figures with a present guess of a few persons short of 300,000 for Atlanta, may be ready for release in Sunday morning's papers, Colonel Fonville McWhorter and Byron Pinkston announced yesterday.

McWhorter is director of the census for Atlanta proper. Pinkston has the fifth congressional district, comprising Rockdale county and the sections of Fulton and DeKalb counties outside the Atlanta city limits.

Neither of the two were prepared to make any statement concerning progress of the decennial count, but other sources indicated a population of 450,000 persons for the three counties, the large majority of them in Fulton and DeKalb.

Unofficial estimates place the population of Atlanta a few thousand short of 300,000, and that of the territory in Pinkston's district around 175,000. The section of Cobb county between Bolton and Marietta, thickly settled with persons who work in the city, is not included in the territory of either of the supervisors.

Both Pinkston and McWhorter announced that their field workers were through with their jobs, and their office staffs would be dismissed and offices closed June 29. All that remains to be done before the count is announced is a check of the compiled figures.

Fort Myers Seeking Tax On Bolita, Latin Game

FORT MYERS, Fla., June 19.—(P)—Fort Myers city council is preparing to slap a tax on the Latin numbers game of Bolita which has become so popular in many Florida cities.

Anticipated proceeds of from $1,000 to $3,000 a month would be allocated to city charity with any surplus going to the general revenue fund. Mayor Sam Fitzsimmons sponsored the ordinance and the city council has scheduled final passage for June 24 unless public opposition halts the move.

CIO Leader Is Appointed To Plan Draft

F. D. R. Names Hillman To Map Training of 2,000,000

WASHINGTON, June 19. (UP)—President Roosevelt today named Sidney Hillman, CIO vice president and labor co-ordinator on the National Defense Council, to draft concrete plans for compulsory government training of 2,000,000 American youths each year.

The appointment was announced by White House Secretary Stephen T. Early less than 24 hours after Mr. Roosevelt revealed he would propose the plan to congress. Early said Hillman will be aided by Secretary of Commerce Harry L. Hopkins, as well as officials of the Civilian Conservation Corps and Civil Aeronautics Authority.

Mr. Roosevelt projected the plan as an integral part of his multi-million dollar preparedness program. He said changing world conditions make it imperative that

It takes those good, old Carter's Little Liver Pills to get these two pints of bile flowing freely to make you feel "up and up." Amazing in making bile flow freely. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills by name. 10c and 25c. Stubbornly refuse anything else.

Here's what to do: First, keep kitchen floors, pantry shelves, cupboards, etc., free from food particles, sugar, etc. Second, sprinkle Bee Brand Insect Powder in corners and along the back edges of shelves, back of and under the sink, refrigerator and stove. Bee Brand kills ants, roaches and other crawling insects quick—yet it's entirely safe to use. Insist on the genuine Bee Brand Insect Powder—in the red and yellow can. It's sold with a guarantee of satisfaction or your money back.

young American men, and possibly young women, be trained for emergency behind-the-lines services and, in some cases, for combat duty.

Although Early indicated the plan had not reached the stage where any fixed age groups could be discussed, a highly placed official said it would call up youths from 19 to 21.

This official estimated that about 2,000,000 young men and women would be trained annually "until the world returns to sanity." He said exemption would be included for 400,000 youths annually because of dependents or physical incapacity, and that there would be little or no pay, beyond subsistence, for those in training.

He declined to estimate cost of the program, but experts pointed out the Civilian Conservation Corps figures, approximately 42 cents a day for food and lodging for each enrollee.

French Plan To Fight On From Africa

troops on the Rhine north of Basel withdrew yesterday.

In general, the French were fighting in an attempt to pull their forces together. They still had about half of their territory in which to fight, and a French military commentator said that although the armies were fighting as isolated groups, "each nevertheless has conserved its cohesion of maneuver in retreat."

The French said their weary troops had delivered a "new battle" against the enemy on the middle Loire before withdrawing "on order."

Meanwhile, French Interior Minister Charles Pomaret repudiated General De Gaulle, recent cabinet member who urged continued resistance and a French-British union in a speech in London Tuesday. De Gaulle was ordered home.

The French cabinet, meeting in an early session in Bordeaux, appointed plenipotentiaries to learn the terms which Hitler and Premier Mussolini agreed upon at their second Munich Tuesday. Spanish press dispatches said Henry Berenger, former ambassador to the United States, was one of the delegates.

The place and the time of the meeting of emissaries was not known. Unofficial Madrid reports said the conference might be in the residence of General Francisco Franco, but authoritative quarters in Berlin said there would be no discussions on neutral territory.

Spain claimed a share in any division of the spoils of war from France, according to reports in Madrid.

Responsible quarters there said flatly that Spain's part in peace negotiations was "not just that of go-between" but the role of a nation which expected a voice in any territorial realignments.

Both Rome and Berlin made it plain France cannot negotiate—she must surrender.

Rome press accounts of the Munich meeting said the axis powers would demand military occupation of France, her gold, her industrial and economical organization turned into war production against England. Diplomatic quarters in Spain said the French fleet must be turned over.

Berlin quarters said the terms would be harsh—intended to make France helpless until the fight with England is settled.

But there were indications that France intends to fight on from her empire, even if she must remain under bondage on the continent.

Marcel Peyrou, French resident general of Tunis, said "this empire stands in an attitude of resistance, full of courage and gratitude."

Presumably part of the French fleet still was with the British in the eastern Mediterranean near Alexandria.

The French radio declared French forces had cleared out Italian submarines in the western Mediterranean and now controlled communications in that area—the line of retreat to North Africa.

In London, Alfred Duff Cooper, British minister of information, declared the English had the backing of American "means" and only had to hold off the "invader" for a few months before the tide would turn in the Allies' favor. France, he said, was not the first nation to go down in defeat but to arise again.

Troops armed with machineguns were stationed at all street corners in Belfast last night after two British soldiers had been disarmed and kidnapped.

The kidnapers spirited the soldiers away in an automobile.

Other troops were stopping all cars and a house-to-house search was made for the stolen firearms. In Tokyo, powerful political factions urged the Japanese government to turn to southeastern Asia and even occupy "protectively" the rich French possession of Indo-China, in anticipation of collapse of the French empire.

Already the government, timing its action to coincide with discussion of the French armistice terms, was reported reliably to have dropped a reminder in Berlin and Rome of its "concern" over Indo-China.

Appellate Court Upholds Denial of Job to Russell

NEW YORK, June 19. (AP)—Without ruling on charges that Bertrand Russell had advocated immoral doctrines, the appellate division of the state supreme court today unanimously affirmed the invalidation of the appointment of the British philosopher to a City College professorship.

It ruled that only the city corporation counsel had the right to appeal for the board of higher education from Justice E. McGeehan's voiding of the appointment. Corporation Council William C. Chanler had refused to make the appeal, and the board majority had retained private attorneys.

"Now don't you budge, Hilary! I'll be right back."

MY DAY: Trade Schools Highly Valuable To Nation

By Eleanor Roosevelt.

NEW YORK CITY.—Yesterday afternoon at the session of the state directors of the National Youth Administration they discussed the problem of obtaining better health facilities for the youth of the nation through the co-operation of the social security agencies. First a doctor painted a very pretty picture of the health facilities available through state departments of health and local setups, and then gradually this charming picture was spoiled by the reports of actual conditions in the field.

One encouraging thing was the ingenuity which has been developed in certain places by the NYA directors in their efforts to obtain co-operation from state and local health groups. They have gone on the principle of "give, so that others may give unto you." In many cases it has proved a very good theory of action.

One young man has his NYA projects making oxygen boxes, tuberculosis collapsible tents and incubators, and in return he receives a health examination for all the young people on his projects. Since we are all interested in the training program now which may be of service to youth whether it is called to war or whether it is allowed peacefully to pursue its livelihood at home, there will, I hope, be a co-ordinating of all the facilities for training young people. Among these, the trade schools of the nation will be extremely valuable. I was interested to find that the United States office of education has information on just what facilities are available.

We have in this country 1,053 well equipped schools in 825 cities, representing every state in the Union. There is a joint investment totaling a billion dollars in all these schools, one-half of which is in equipment. In addition to this, there are 155 engineering schools on the higher level of technical ability. With their equipment they could increase their present enrollment by 30,000 trainees per year. This information is valuable in co-ordinating our efforts in the field of training.

I am sure that many people who, like myself, have lived long periods of time in foreign countries, are feeling heavy hearted these days because of the sorrow which is engulfing friends in other nations. This taking over of three small countries by Russia may be a case of self-defense, but we used to think ourselves equally well defended by friendly neighbors. The plight of France, which has been a refuge for so many exiles from other nations, brings up a sad picture of what may happen to these refugees, as well as to the natives of France itself.

The German people have been fortunate that neither in the last war nor in this one has much of the fighting been on their own soil. I sometimes think that has built up insensibility among them to what it means to be invaded. One does not expect mercy from their leaders, but one hopes almost against hope that the qualities of the individual Germans, whom so many of us have known and respected and loved, will make it impossible for them to carry out harsh and unjust demands made upon their gallant enemies.

Insist That Hubby Wear Becoming, Matching Colors

By Yolande Gwin.

Colorful characters in history always make good topics for conversation.

AS YOUR MAN is the most colorful character in your life, keep him that way, but in the right way. One of the most important points to remember are his clothes. A bad mixture of colors in his attire will be an unfortunate as well as unbecoming set-up for him.

Of course white shirts look simply grand, but there is a time and place for them. If your OAO (One and Only) has already gotten himself a good summer tan, and insists on wearing a white shirt, something should be done about it. You might go down and buy him a stack of good medium blue or healthy tan shirts and collars, making the mistake of not getting white on purpose. When you stage your little surprise party by pling all the shirts in a tempting stock either on his dressing table or at his place at the breakfast table, never let him think that you know the shirts are the wrong color. (He likes white ones you know.)

When he opens them and there is not a white one in the stack, just act surprised and say: "Why the old manie clerk, I am so sorry! I'll take them back this very day and have them changed. I'm so disappointed! But try one of these blue ones on, dear, so I can see how divine you look."

He will, and as you have your facts in hand, you can tell him that the blue (or the brown) look so wonderful with his sunburn, say:

"You know, I believe those dark blue shirts make your neck look less conspicuous with that tan. You don't want people to call you a giraffe like old Mr. Biffon, do you?"

If you inject the right amount of humor in this little remark it will have the necessary effect and your OAO will never know you meant him; and that there is no such person as Mr. Biffon! And he will keep the blue and the tan shirts.

New Pound Needed.

Iola, Kan., is calling for estimates on the cost of a new dog pound. The reason: The present pound is an old frame one. Frequently, the owners of impounded dogs come in the night, pull off a board and rescue their pets. Then the whole collection of pooches scampers out.

Today's Charm Tip

For Beach Patrons. Believe those warnings that intensely burned skin is neither thankful nor becoming and take protective measures against excess burning.

HOLLYWOOD, June 19.—Any takers for Greta Garbo? I am addressing motion picture producers.

For the first time in Greta's long sojourn at M.-G.-M.—14 years—the studio is willing to offer her on a loan-out deal. I understand that Warners are interested. But Greta herself would prefer to work with Ernst Lubitsch, who is now working for Sol Lesser.

Be interesting to see whether Garbo's great secrecy act can continue away from the home lot. At Metro, the little gal has them all trained to leave her strictly alone. But in another studio, curiosity might get the upper hand of promises and good manners. By the way, Greta is now investing all her spare cash in good old United States bonds. And is buying a ranch in the San Fernando valley.

It didn't take long for Jimmy Cagney to wise up Director Anatole Litvak on the subject of working hours. Jimmy's contract reads that he is to finish work at 6 p. m., but Litvak, famous for his disregard of such matters, kept Cagney toiling the other day until 6:45 p. m. So the next evening at 6 p. m. sharp, Jimmy walked off the set—in the middle of a "take."

I remember when Litvak was making a picture with Donald Crisp, he kept the actor working until 4 a. m. At which time Crisp warned—"I'm going home after this 'take.'" "No, no," protested Litvak—"just one more 'take.'"

A few minutes later, "Where's Mr. Crisp?" asked Litvak. "Remember that noise you just heard?" he was told. "That was Mr. Crisp going home!"

Rosalind Russell and Bette Davis created something new in furors when they auctioned off personal apparel for the Red Cross. "How much for your panties?" yelled a male to Miss Russell. Which was the cue for Roz to exit. . . . Incidentally, Miss Davis gives her usual swell performance in "all this and heaven, too," but I do wish she wouldn't be so tragic in all her pictures. Can't we have her in one comedy—just for a change? . . . Lew Ayres tells me that when he stopped off in Rio de Janeiro he was surrounded by interviewers—"and I was all prepared to tell them the story of my life. But all they wanted to know was—What is Mickey Rooney like?"

Brenda Marshall thought she was an old friend of Frances Farmer—until the other lunch time when Brenda rushed up to say, "Hello, Frances," and was greeted with a frozen stare. No wonder that Miss Farmer is unpopular in Hollywood. What's eating you anyway, Frances? . . . Sight of the week: Mrs. William Powell reading a book on etiquette and how to have charm, etc. . . .

Notes on love—poney and/or otherwise. . . . Bruce Cabot is escorting Simone Simon to the public house (no film offers yet for the lady). . . . Norma Shearer is minus masculine admirers for the duration of her current picture, "Escape." She doesn't believe in mixing work with pleasure. And anyway, Mr. Raft is out of town.

Wayne Morris and wife show the world they are still in love by kissing and embracing within range of the "still" cameramen. (At least 10 reporters have had them getting a divorce.) Ditto for Lana Turner and Artie Shaw. . . . Dorothy Lamour has joined a book club or something in order to have lots of bright conversation with her newest beau—Gregory Bautzer, who seems to be recovering rapidly from his jilting by Lana Turner.

Say, that Carole Landis is a smart business woman for all her baby stare. First she promotes a loud revolt against the title "ping" girl. Then she refuses to fulfill her contract with a swimming suit manufacturer to pose in his wares. Both items netted her plenty of publicity—including photographs of Carole in the supposedly hated swimming suit. Who's your press agent, Carole?

Have you a household problem to solve? Write your question clearly, sign your name and address, enclose a three-cent postage stamp and mail to the Woman's Editor of The Constitution, 1013 15th street, Washington, D. C., for a reply. Don't telephone; write as directed.

Stand erect. Place right foot straight out at side, resting it on back of heavy chair. Knee must be turned up. Curve arms over head, then bend torso slowly to right as far as comfortable. Stretch. Be sure to bend straight to side; don't cheat to the front. Reverse. This stretches muscles in legs, through torso. Do it correctly and you'll also improve your posture.

It Takes Plenty of Vitality And Will Power To Reduce

By Ida Jean Kain.

When the scales jump down from 148 to 142 in a couple of weeks, and keep moving right on down to 138, reducing isn't half bad. But just about the time you start to brag, you suddenly stop losing. The scales seessaw up and down and you can't make any headway at all!

If you started slimming in the spring you would have lost from 10 to 12 pounds at this point. But, sooner or later, this initial weight loss is doomed to be followed by a stationary period, during which you may not lose again for two weeks. But cheer up! If you have lost 10 pounds, you can lose 20, 30, or 40—or as many more as you need to lose.

This interval is an excellent time for medical check-over. If everyone would follow her doctor's advice in reducing, there would be more successful reducers. Before you start your second reducing lap, get your doctor's advice as to how much more weight you can lose with safety.

A temporary calorie cut may be necessary to start you off again. Deduct 200 calories from your present reducing menu. If you have been using the 1,200 calorie menu, drop down to 1,000 calories daily for the remainder of the week. Or, if you have been following the 1,000 calorie menu, go on "The Fruit, Bran, Vegetable Regime" for two days next week.

The fewer the calories, the more careful you must be that the protective foods are included in the menu. Otherwise, you will not have the vitality to reduce—and it takes plenty of vitality. Here are the foods to which the 1,000 calorie menu limits you:

Essential Foods.	Calories
Lean meat, fish or fowl, liberal serving	200
Two cooked vegetables, one a green leafy	100
Two or more raw vegetables	25
Two fresh fruits, one a citrus	150
Three parts of butter, each 1/4-inch thick	150
Bread, whole wheat, three slices	225
Skim milk or buttermilk, 1 glass	80
One egg	75

You cannot subtract any food from that list and keep it—nor can you add to it and lose weight at this critical period in your slimming program. Anyone following such a restricted diet should take one vitamin A capsule daily, even in the summer, to assure adequate amounts of this vitamin.

When you resume losing, you will probably not average more than one pound per week, but that is excellent progress. In fact, you should not be discouraged if your weight loss does not exceed a fourth pound per week, provided the loss is steady.

BALANCED 1,000 CALORIE MENU.

Breakfast.	Calories
Orange juice, 1/4 glass	55
Whole wheat toast, 2 thin slices	100
Butter, 1 pat, 1/4-inch thick	50
Coffee, clear.

Luncheon.	Calories
Egg salad sandwich (boiled dressing, no butter)	250
Stewed tomatoes, 1/4 cup	35
Buttermilk or skim milk	80

Dinner.	Calories
Lamb chop, 1 broiled	100
Baked potato	100
Butter, 1 pat	50
String beans, 1 cup	30
Combination green salad (vinegar, seasoning)	25
Fresh fruit	100

Total calories for day 975

If you have struck a lull in losing, send stamped return envelope to Miss Kain, in care of The Atlanta Constitution, for the "Fruit, Bran, Vegetable Regime" and follow it for a couple of days—you'll lose again!

POINTS FOR PARENTS

By Edyth Thomas Wallace.

Mother: "Bettie plays out-doors all morning and when she comes in for lunch she's as hungry as a bear."

Mother: "Come on now, dear, take just one more spoonful . . . that's a big girl . . . now just one more, etc., etc."

The best method ever devised to make a child eat is to make him hungry.

Mother Makes Family Game Of Good Manners

By Caroline Chatfield.

A stay-at-home went visiting recently to a neighboring state and, as is usually the case with a housewife who's had a vacation, she came home full of pep and high purposes. She'd been to luncheon and dinners galore and she had, as she expressed it, an opportunity to see how few women have easy grace and poise when they are at a party. Her first night at home she came to the dinner table armed with carbon copies of 10 Don't's which she expected to observe and teach her daughters to observe. When the family had its full of making sport of mama they settled down to learn their lessons which read as follows:

Don't finger your face, hair and nails while at the table.
Don't cup your chin in your hand or spread your fingers over your cheek.
Don't talk with food in your mouth.
Don't comment on the food except to pay a compliment, nor tell your neighbor what you can and cannot eat.
Don't speak of physical ailments unless asked and then say as little as possible.
Don't break in while another person is speaking, however important your remark may be.
Don't keep up incessant chatter; give others a chance to talk.
Don't avert your eyes from the eyes of the person you are speaking to.
Don't raise your voice to be heard above the din but lower it and you will get attention.
Don't let your mind wander from the person speaking to you. The glassy look will give you away.

At this writing, the coin bank on the sideboard is heavy with silver dime forfeits deposited by each member of the family for infringement of rules.

Try and Explain It.

All-Day Style

By Lillian Mae.

Here it is—your wear-every-where summer dress! For though this Lillian Mae frock, Pattern 4489, is made in the wonderfully convenient button-front style, its clever designing prevents any "stay-at-home" appearance. Both the front and back skirt are smartly paneled. The horn-shaped pockets are optional but add such spirited novelty! See how the gently bloused bodice is darted neatly at the shoulders and gathered above the waist. The attractive collar and the cuffs on the short-sleeved style are becoming in either a matching fabric or in a colorful contrast, perhaps vividly edged with ric-rac. An everyday, day-long style you really need for summer!

Pattern 4489 is available in misses' and women's sizes 16, 18, 20, 22, 24, 26, 28, 30, 32, 34, 36, 38, 40, 42, 44 and 46. Size 36 takes 4 5/8 yards 35-inch fabric and 2 1/4 yards ric-rac. Person on Restricted Diet Must Watch Vitamin Intake

By Dr. William Brady.

Persons with stomach (gastric) or duodenal ulcer generally adhere to more or less restricted diets. This is all right so far as comfort is concerned, provided the individual knows which foods he or she can take with comfort and which foods are likely to cause distress.

But there is another aspect of the question which is quite as important in the long run and merits the careful consideration of every peptic ulcer sufferer, whether the physician or specialist consulted from time to time cautions about it or not. I refer to the state of the patient's nutrition, particularly to the hypo-vitaminosis from which anyone following a restricted diet is likely to suffer.

Effects of moderate deficiencies of the essential vitamins are difficult to recognize in any case, and especially when the functional disturbances due to lack of enough of this or that vitamin are masked by the symptoms of such a disease as peptic ulcer, anemia or colitis, for instance. Medical textbooks are still pretty vague or indeed silent about this, and many doctors are incapable of making practical observations from their own clinical experience.

One eminent authority, McCarrion, British army surgeon who lived for many years in the Himalayas, found that the natives practically never had either gastric ulcer or appendicitis and inferred that their diet, consisting chiefly of eggs, milk, vegetable, whole grains—foods with their natural vitamin B complex and C content unimpaired by refining processes—accounted for the rarity of such diseases among them.

Without going further into the problem of the far-reaching effects of moderate deficiency of the essential vitamins, let us say that in any circumstance it is harmless to supplement the restricted diet with a suitable concentrate of the vitamins most likely to be deficient in the diet.

Many peptic ulcer sufferers can insure an adequate intake of vitamin B complex by eating three or four ounces of wheat germ daily, this being the richest natural food source of B complex. Physicians commonly exclude raw fruit or fruit juice from the peptic ulcer diet, and that makes an adequate vitamin C ration difficult to provide in the food. Although eggs are usually allowed (egg yolk is the richest natural source of vitamin D) it is advisable in most instances to take some additional vitamin D to supplement the diet. Every physician abreast of progress is now prepared to advise or prescribe suitable vitamin concentrates to supplement the restricted diet. Everyone subject to peptic ulcer should make sure to get an adequate daily ration of the essential vitamins—vitamins A, B complex, C, D—in one form or another, especially B complex which is invariably deficient in the peptic ulcer diet.

'The Star' Makes Its Debut As St. Simons News Sheet

SHINING AS BRIGHTLY as its name implies, The Star, the weekly newspaper at St. Simons and Sea Island, made its debut this week filled with local news of the Golden Isles of Georgia. Interspersed with social chit-chat concerning Atlantans as well as other visitors at the popular seacoast resorts.

Luttrell Tift holds the chair of editor of the six-page paper and her brother, Amos Tift Jr., is business manager, while a younger brother, David Tift, is circulation manager. The trio, the children of Mr. and Mrs. Amos Tift, of Tifton, have as their associates Matt McFerrin as assistant business manager and Nancy Collier as society editor.

The Star, made up in tabloid style, also serves as an advertising medium for the thriving seacoast community, and many local merchants have built or enlarged their establishments to meet the demands for bigger and better businesses.

The first issue carries three large wedding write-ups, that of Grant and Louisa Robert LeRoux; that of the former Susan Garrett and Bob Ison, and also the coverage of Emmie Martin's marriage to Bob Chambers, all three being outstanding social events on the June calendar.

In the "Who's Who" column, Sally Forth found interesting bits concerning prominent Atlantans now at the island. Mr. and Mrs. A. O. Mitchell are at "Happy Day" at St. Simons, and Mr. and Mrs. O. F. Travis are at Blue Haven. Mr. and Mrs. Frank Anderson are among island visitors, as are Mrs. J. P. Allen and her three children, who are at the Sharp cottage. Mr. and Mrs. Bona Allen III have as their guests Angelique deGolian and Stanley Allen, of Atlanta.

Mr. and Mrs. James L. Dickey are at their cottage, Dunecore, on East Beach, and have as their guests Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Kiser and Mr. and Mrs. Robert F. Maddox. Mr. and Mrs. M. A. new high. Many a graduated cadet and his "best girl" are now "Lieutenant and Mrs. ..."

For the past several years, Sally learns, there has been a rule at the academy that no weddings may take place in the cadet chapel on the day of graduation, but the day after what a rush there is! This year 30 weddings took place on June 12 at the famous little Cadet chapel.

For one who has been to June Week at the West Point Military Academy, there is a tender memory of Flirtation Walk and Kissing Rock. The legend, you know, is that if the girl should refuse the proper forfeit of a kiss at the point where the famous rock hangs over the pathway, there will be a terrific crash of retribution. And, of course, it goes without saying that Kissing Rock hasn't fallen yet!

Alien To Remain In State Hospital

Braswell Deen, director of the State Department of Public Welfare, said yesterday he had been notified there was one alien in the state hospital at Milledgeville but added he would take no steps to have the patient removed.

Dr. John W. Oden, superintendent of the hospital, wrote Deen a letter telling him about the inmate and Deen immediately replied with orders that he be allowed to remain.

Deen pointed out that although the inmate is an alien, "it is necessary that he be given humane treatment," and added, "this is as the Golden Rule would require."

Rural Housing Bill Passage Is Seen

Early passage of the rural housing bill by congress, assuring Georgia of funds for its rural housing program, was predicted yesterday by Fred T. Bridges, secretary-treasurer of the Georgia Farmers Union.

Bridges pointed out that the bill has at last been reported by the banking and currency committee of the house, virtually assuring its passage at this session of congress.

Approximately 130 counties in the state already have set up local housing authorities and will be in position to take advantage of the housing funds, Bridges said.

Hathcock Asks Superior Court Judge's Post

Veteran Jurist Seeks Bench Position Held by A. L. Etheridge.

Judge T. O. Hathcock yesterday announced his candidacy for judge of the superior court, to succeed Judge A. L. Etheridge.

Judge Hathcock was born and reared in Fulton county, and attended the public school at Red Oak and the Georgia Military Academy at College Park. Upon graduation he entered the law office of the late Judge John T. Pendleton, where he studied law until his admission to the bar.

He became one of the original judges of the municipal court of Atlanta upon its creation in 1914, and is one of the senior judges in point of service in Fulton county. He always has been active in church and Sunday school work and is one of the directors of the Georgia Sunday School Association. Judge Hathcock's statement follows:

It has long been my ambition to become a judge of the superior court of the Atlanta circuit, and I "earn" the announcement previously made of my candidacy to succeed Hon. A. L. Etheridge, recently appointed by Governor Rivers to fill the unexpired term of the beloved and lamented Judge E. D. Thomas.

My long experience as a judge of the civil court of Fulton county, formerly the municipal court of Atlanta, during which time I tried thousands of civil cases, and for two years assisted Judge Jesse M. Wood in the trial of criminal cases by the hundreds, I feel fully qualified to perform the more important duties of the superior court bench.

A candidate for a judgeship can only promise the people whom he serves an impartial administration of the law. This I pledge to do with absolute fairness to all, and to do my utmost to administer justice under the law. This is all any candidate for a judgeship should pledge. This is all the voters of this circuit should expect from any man occupying such an exalted and responsible office.

BEN HILL GROWS.

Mrs. Hughes will be the only matron at the institution at present. Her salary has not been definitely set but will range between $75 and $100 monthly, Byars said.

Dahlbender Wins Medal at 142

Gene Gaillard,

16-Year-Old Atlanta High School Boy Plays
Steadily in Rain.

By AL SHARP.
Constitution Golf Writer.
CHATTANOOGA COUNTRY CLUB, CHATTANOOGA, Tenn., June 19.—Gene Dahlbender Jr., 16-year-old Atlanta golfer, took the medal in the southern amateur golf tournament here today with a score of 142. It was Dahlbender's first start in the southern.

Dahlbender added a 72 to his par 70 of yesterday to become the youngest player to accomplish the feat. Jack Wenzler, of Memphis, was 18 when he won the medal in 1921.

Gene was 2 strokes in front of the fast field.

Four players, including two from Atlanta, were tied for second place at 144.

FOUR TIE AT 144.
Gene Gaillard, of Atlanta, duplicated his 72 and Charlie Dannals, of Atlanta, fired a 73 today after opening up with a 71. The others listed at 144 were Johnny Cummings, former baseball player from Memphis and runner-up to Bobby Dunkelberger last year at Nashville, and Ed Schreiber, 16-year-old Charlotte (N. C.) entrant.

Other Atlantans making the championship division were Danny Yates, William Johnson, Harold Crow, Carling Dinkler Jr. and Crawford Rainwater.

Yates and Johnson had 152's, the former scoring 77-75 and the latter reversing the procedure. Crow, Rainwater and Dinkler barely made the grade without getting in the playoff with 153's. Rainwater had 76-77; Dinkler, 77-76 and Crow, 79-74.

Tommy Barnes, listed as an Atlanta threat, failed to qualify for the first division, as he fired a 76 to go with his 81 of yesterday for a total of 157.

It took 153 to get in without a struggle. Six players, including Dallas Weaver, of Cedartown, Ga., and Red Roberts, of Dalton, Ga., tied at 154 and went into a playoff for the last place in the title division.

JONES WINS PLAY-OFF.
The playoff was won by Jack Jones, of Chattanooga, on the fifth hole. Roberts lost out on the third hole with a bogey 6.

Other Georgians making the top division were:

H. A. Van Sickle, of Savannah, with 150, and Johnny Oliver, of Valdosta, with 153.

In scoring the two-over-par 72 today to miss the record of 139 by three shots, Dahlbender had two birdies and four bogeys.

Three putts on the first hole, a second shot in the trap at the second hole, missing the green with his tee shot at the 11th and a missed drive on the 12th hole cost Dahlbender four strokes and the record.

Cowboy Luttrell Will Arrive

Friday, Set Up Training Camp

Cowboy Luttrell, the wild man from the west, who has become a national figure overnight as a result of his scheduled 10-round fight with Jack Dempsey at the Atlanta ball park July 1, will hit town tomorrow and immediately set up a training camp.

Luttrell, who fought for three years before entering the wrestling game, has advised Promoter Jim Downing to round up a big list of rugged sparring partners. "I don't wanna pay any hospital bills, so get some guys with iron jaws," continued the self-styled bad man.

"And another thing," continued the cowboy, "don't let Dempsey or his manager come near my camp. If Dempsey sees how I'm punching, he'll never get close to the ring July 1."

Dempsey, who has all the money and prestige one man needs, is training in New York. Jack is just restless and eager for a new thrill. He thinks he punches as well as ever and apparently believes himself capable of blasting Luttrell's head off his shoulders.

That the fight has caught the nation's fancy continues to be reflected in the unprecedented ticket sales. Promoter Jim Downing helped Dempsey promote the Stribling-Sharkey fight at Miami in 1931. It drew a gate of $450,000. Downing says early sales for the fight here have surpassed those in the Miami affair.

The pass list has been suspended. The Red Cross will receive a goodly share of the receipts.

Grant Defeats Jimmy Evert In Four Sets

Bitsy Plays McNeill Today; Everett Upsets Prusoff, Faces Riggs.

CHICAGO, June 19.—(P)—Robert Riggs and Alice Marble came through victorious again today in the national clay courts championships.

Riggs, top seeded in the men's division, got started slowly, then disposed of Max Davidson, of Chicago, 4-6, 6-3, 6-2, 7-5, in the third round of the men's singles.

Paired with Charles Hare, of England, he also hurled the first round in the doubles competition.

The two defeated Harris Everett and Aleo Guerry, of Chapel Hill, N. C., 7-5, 6-1, 6-2.

Meantime, Miss Marble reached the women's singles semifinals with a 7-5, 6-3 victory over Mary Arnold, of Los Angeles, her doubles partner.

The only dent in the seeded ranks resulted from Everett's victory over Henry Prusoff, of Seattle. Prusoff, who was seventh in the rankings, lost, 7-5, 6-3, 6-3.

Frank Parker, of Pasadena, defending champion in the singles, erased his fellow townsman, David Freeman, 6-2, 7-5, 6-2; Don McNeill, of Oklahoma City, eliminated another Californian, Jack Kramer, 6-1, 6-4, 8-6; Bryan Grant, of Atlanta, was forced into a 24-game set with Jimmy Evert, of Chicago, before emerging victor, 6-3, 6-3, 11-13, 6-2.

Garner Mulloy, of Coral Gables, Fla., went four sets to defeat Robert Peacock, of Los Angeles, but the third-seeded Welby Van Horn, of Los Angeles, had the most difficult siege. He finally turned back Chicago's Gardner Larned, 1-6, 6-4, 7-5, 4-6, 6-4.

Tomorrow's men's features send Everett, Prusoff's conqueror, against Riggs, and match McNeill with Grant. Miss Marble, playing late in the day, will meet Virginia Wolfenden, of Berkeley, Cal.

In men's doubles (first round), Edward Allon, Berkeley, Cal., and Bryan Grant, Atlanta, Ga., defeated Marshall Chambers and William Talbert, Cincinnati, 7-9, 9-7, 8-6, 6-3, 6-3.

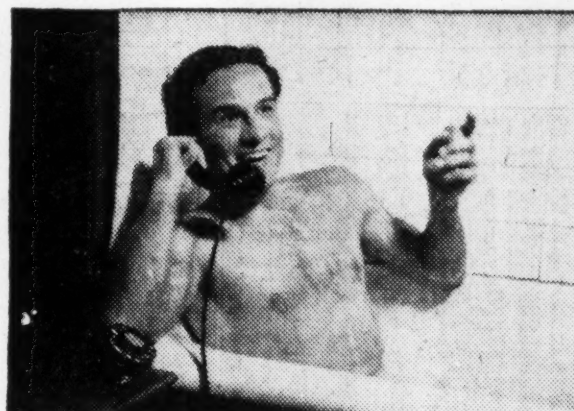

Gillespie Wins Another Match.

WILMINGTON, Del., June 19.—(P)—Unseeded Gordon Giles, of the University of Utah, scored a major upset in the middle states tennis championships today by beating the national intercollegiate champion, Frank Guernsey, of Rice Institute, 7-5, 7-5.

Bill Gillespie, of Miami University, beat Walter Driver, of El Paso, Texas, 6-2, 7-5.

THE MORTAL STORM

Freya Goes To Hear Her Father Lecture; The Hall Is Only Half-Filled

By PHYLLIS BOTTOME.

SYNOPSIS.
Alone on a skiing trip on the great Wetterstein mountain after her strenuous first year's medical examinations, Freya Roth is rescued from a group of angry peasants by Hans Breiten, peasant himself, to whom Freya is instantly attracted. Despite the fact that her father, Dr. Johann Roth, celebrated scientist, is Jewish, and her mother a gentle, German aristocrat, Freya has never known anything but love and unity in her home. Now the shadow of Hitler looms over her native Germany, and she is amazed when her stepbrothers become Nazis. Accompanying her from the scene of her danger at the hands of the angry peasants whom she has prevented from killing a hare, Hans asserts that he is a Communist. It is Freya's first encounter with a Communist, but, immediately attracted to him for his evident sincerity, Freya listens to his philosophy of the brotherhood of man. NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

INSTALLMENT X.

"No," Freya thought to herself, "Nazis cannot be right—for they would do again what we have done before, turn the state into an arsenal and prepare a whole nation for death! We cannot worship such a state—for we are young—we want to live!" And she thought with a shudder of Olaf and Emil in their Nazi uniforms.

Such fears threw her more ardently than ever into her work at the hospital. There they fought death—not life—and were happy fighting it. There, too, she could feel her father safe in his great fame. She loved to go to his lectures and share the thrill of his packed audiences. His words lived; they were so simple that they reached the stupidest student in the room, and so vital that the most brilliant and sophisticated could not duck beneath their simplicity.

The hospital was a long walk from the university. Wrapped in her Loden cloak, Freya battled her way against the ferocious cold, wondering not for the first time, where Hans was, and if he, too, would have understood and appreciated her father's lectures.

She was late, and afraid that she would not be able to get inside the hall. The lecture room was usually so crowded that students plastered themselves against the wall and sat on the steps of the platform; but today when Freya pushed back the door, she found the hall half empty.

Had the university clock gone wrong? Had she misread the number of the hall on the entrance board? No—it was her father's lecture room, for there he was as usual crouched over his desk, his long gray beard more wispy than ever, his small, keen eyes ablaze as usual with the light of his thought.

The half-empty hall was slowly warming with his words. His occasional sly wit shook the students into laughter. The steady chain of his reasoning bound them inflexibly to his meaning. . . . It was all right, Freya told herself reassuringly, the emptiness—the odd silences—could only be the cold. Had not she—his own daughter—thought twice before facing the icy funnel of the Leopoldstrasse instead of going home?

There was no alternation in her father's vitality of thought, it was as swift and sure as usual, and as usual it reached its goal; but when his voice gathered force for its last succinct summing-up, dropped, silence hung over the room with the weight of frost.

Freya gazed around her in blank amazement. No applause? No questions? But the students always asked questions, the difficulty was to stop their flow; and where was the accustomed violent outbreak of prolonged applause?

The students crowded together like a flock of sheep, none of them stopped at Johann Roth's desk for a final word or greeting—they pushed and jostled each other on their way to the door as if they were escaping from a fire.

Freya found herself alone in the lecture room with her father.

His twinkling eyes met her anxious ones with a smiling reassurance. "There is something perhaps," he suggested, "that specially interests them this afternoon! I have not looked at the papers today—an international football match may be in progress—or perhaps it is so near Christmas that they want to get to the market before it closes. Curious thought, I admit—Ebert—Bardt—Wolffinger—Rosenheim—my chief students—never before have they failed to stay and discuss a lecture. To bolt a lecture down without questions is like eating meat without biting it. But we must not be disturbed! It is an interesting subject—the first stages of a germ attack—but perhaps I went too fast for them. Or was not clear enough? I may have overfilled their plate! Your mother says that if I made a pudding I should put all the contents of the kitchen into it, and then ask for more. There is nothing so difficult to understand as congested thought. No doubt that it is. I was unclear and they are overfed!"

Johann Roth looked round triumphantly for his spectacles, and after some searching Freya found them pushed backwards into his hair. "The lecture was quite clear, Father," Freya said, when she had disentangled the spectacles. A look of disappointment crossed her father's face, as if he had hoped that his lecture had been at fault.

"Well, well," Johann Roth said vaguely, "a full subject is like heavy traffic, there are a hundred ways of not getting through it safely, and only one right way. It is upon this one right way that a good mind should clench—but not even a good mind clenches always! Come, let us escape from our analogy and go home! Analogies are misleading, after all—and we can be thankful that a bad lecture is not as disastrous as a motor car accident."

"But it was a good lecture!" Freya persisted. "It was as always, Father—and they were not as always!"

Her father shrugged on his coat and dragged at his muffler, as if he wanted to leave the empty hall behind them as quickly as possible. "If one student is interested, a lecturer has nothing to regret," he said cheerfully, "for a single mind can carry seed."

What is it that the neglected English poet, Coventry Patmore, says? 'The truth is great and shall prevail, When none care whether it prevail or not.' I am fond of the English poets. They feel deeply and express themselves simply. They are not ornate like the French, or verbose as we Germans are—except of course our old friend Heine! I see that in the new anthologies the Nazis have decided that Heine did not write the 'Lorelei.' Our poor race, I take it, is to have no ornaments. Einstein's discovery was a blunder and Jesus Christ was a Prussian Officer! But relatively, the 'Lorelei' and the gospels, these things have an awkward way of remaining what they are—Nazis or no Nazis!"

The big doors of the university swung behind them. When they were outside them, opposite the fountain, Freya remembered that the porter had not been there to hold them open for her father, and to exchange their long accustomed good night greeting. It was a little thing, but it fell as coldly on her heart, as the few stranded drops of water fell from the university fountain, into its frozen basin.

The cold of the street felt like a plunge into an ice-cold bath. The houses wore a pallid look, as if they were drained of light and color. Trams shrieked and jarred their way over the frozen rails, while motors on chains shuffled and jostled each other on the ice-bound roads, with unaccustomed diffidence.

In the Odeonplatz the heavy models of Florentine statues looked more disreputably comfortable than ever.

As they turned down a little alley between high walls, leading from the Leopoldstrasse to the Kaulbach, they came face to face with an old acquaintance. The professor paused with outstretched hand. His smile died slowly on his lips—for the general, gazing over their heads, passed them without a greeting.

"Father! Father!" Freya cried aghast, "that was General von Sturmer, the Maberger's cousin! He must have seen us! He looked right at us! What is happening today? What does everything mean? Are we lepers?"

"Probably nothing!" the professor said, increasing his pace. "It may be the good general was concentrating upon an important train of thought, and so did not notice us. At such a moment I myself have been guilty of just such gaffes. Or the cold may have dazed him. Such things must not be taken seriously unless we are sure that they are seriously meant. We will ring him up when we get in, and if he says he did not see us, all will be well! And if not—we shall know soon enough what reason he had for cutting his old friends. Most points of offense are childish things. Easy to put right with a little good will on one side or the other."

And no doubt after a good cup of your mother's coffee, we shall believe—as I think it is very possible to think—that the rest were accidents!" Freya clung to her father in silence. She was not certain, she could not believe that these accumulated slights were accidents.

The sky was dark with unshed snow too cold to fall; everything beneath it wore the same bloodless pallor. The stripped trees were the color of the stone walls they leaned against. Freya could hardly believe they held the life of the spring in them.

On the steps of their house stood Olaf, slim and rigid in his brown uniform. Freya's heart sprang to meet him. For no apparent reason, there are scenes that etch themselves forever on the mind. It is as if they were stamped by an invisible hand with an indestructible seal. The sight of Olaf looking down at them from the steps remained with Freya until she died. . . . He looked so young, so beautiful and so kind.

His grave eyes smiled, as with a mock salute, he flung open the door for them. "Wie geht's, Vater?" he demanded.

"Ganz gut, Sohn!" Johann Roth answered in his slow deep voice. "It," Freya thought with passionate eagerness, "if they're both all right together—then everything must be all right!"

Olaf followed them into the hall, his neat shoulders flung back. The color had not been frozen from his fair young cheeks, and his blue eyes had the hard bright sparkle of a frost flower.

On the hall table lay a letter addressed to Freya in a round, childish handwriting.

Her father's and Olaf's eyes fixed themselves curiously upon her. She knew that the letter was from Hans, but she did not know that she was trembling, until she felt their eyes upon her.

With a muttered curse, Freya picked up the letter and ran upstairs to her room, locking the door behind her, although she well knew that no one would seek to follow her.

"Dear Fraulein Freya," she read. "I have wanted very much to see you, and I have turned it over often in my mind. I remember very well what you said, but it is difficult for me to believe that it would not be too hard for you to be my friend. If I were only a peasant it would still be hard; but to be both a peasant and a Communist—even for your brave heart—this would be too difficult to face! I am not a hare, that you need run between the sticks to save me! And this time it would be your friends and not strangers, who would be angry with you. That is always worse, I think. I shall understand that we must not meet again, and not resent it.

Nothing could happen that would make me think without pleasure of our meeting upon the Wetterstein.

Hans Breiten."

Her eyes followed every word, but she read the letter with her heart. When she had finished reading it for the second time, she put it in a drawer where there was a bag of lavender, that smelled sweet. Without tidying her roughly blown brown curls, she raced downstairs to her father's study.

Her parents were alone together, and it occurred to Freya afterwards that they looked like people who were discussing a subject of extreme importance, but at the moment Freya's own urgency was too great for her unconscious observation to take effect. She looked quickly from one the other, wondering which of them would be the more vulnerable to her purpose. Both respected justice, but perhaps her father would be the easier to convince as to where justice lay.

"Daddy," she said in a challenging voice, "that letter in the hall was from my friend, Hans Breiten—the peasant boy who helped me when I interfered about the hare—you remember that Sunday at St. Johans?"

Both her parents seemed to remember this episode. Her mother said, as if she were completing a picture already familiar, but not yet quite filled out. "The peasant boy—who is also a Communist?"

"Yes," Freya admitted, tossing back her curls, and taking a position upon the hearthrug that dominated—or that she hoped dominated—her attentive parents. "This is what he says—that it might be difficult for me to be his friend—and that you wouldn't want to meet him. He says he will not resent it—but it is I who would resent it!—if you will not have him here! Why should I not have my friends in my own home—and why should I not see him again? What does it matter what he thinks? Is not thought free?"

Your Own Horoscope for Today

By ALICE DENTON JENNINGS, Noted Atlanta Astrologist

What today means to you if you were born between:

March 21 and April 19 (ARIES)—You are apt to have an erratic or deceptive mental condition before 10:15 a. m. At this time you should distrust impulsiveness and avoid new and fancy ideas. After 10:15 a. m. promoting new ideas soundly and wisely, and is a period when you can gain through originality and dash.

April 20 and May 20 (TAURUS)—Previous to 8 a. m. you may find hard going, but if you will not be too determined to have your way, from 8 a. m. throughout the day and evening is most favorable for out of the ordinary affairs progressive matters, dealing with people are unusual, and for brilliance or accomplishment.

May 21 and June 20 (GEMINI)—The entire day until 7:33 p. m. favors things of a substantial nature or which are intended to be permanent. This is especially true in matters relating to land, property, produce, and in dealings with older people.

June 21 and July 22 (CANCER)—Mixed influences mark this as a very erratic day for mental work, for there is apt to be a great deal of nervous tension and any feelings that you should make haste should be held in check. However, dealings with loved ones, in domestic matters, and around women can be handled tactfully and capably.

July 23 and August 22 (LEO)—After 7:10 a. m. and continuing throughout the day favors attention to ordinary details only. Use diplomacy rather than force, and remember that "haste makes waste."

August 23 and September 22 (VIRGO)—Be on your guard against unwise information or entering into unwise affairs during the entire day. It will be better to pursue the beaten path in a health way, your vitality may be low or you may be thrown into contact with people who are nervous and uncertain.

September 23 and October 22 (LIBRA)—While it will not be a fortunate period to be "bossy" before 12:45 noon, this can be a favorably active period for conferences, dealings with relatives, finances, and travel.

After 12:45 p. m. use care in your dealings with older people and plan to use diplomacy.

October 23 and November 21 (SCORPIO)—Before 1:03 holds conservative influences favoring affairs of a substantial basis, going at things in a positive way, attacking old problems, and finishing up works that have been dragging.

After 1:03 radical changes or departures from ordinary procedures should be guarded against, and sudden decisions are likely to prove untrustworthy.

November 22 and December 21 (SAGITTARIUS)—This should be a happy day indeed, for several of the slow-moving planets are aspecting each other most favorably, bringing unusual gains to those who come under their favor.

December 22 and January 19 (CAPRICORN)—The hours previous to 12 noon should be filled with optimism and joviality. You will enjoy the beauty in life, and have a deep appreciation for fine things and lovely thoughts.

January 20 and February 18 (AQUARIUS)—The early morning hours, previous to 3:24 a. m., suggests that you use temperance in all you do. Use care around liquids or in travel.

February 19 and March 20 (PISCES)—Between 8 a. m. and 5:28 p. m. you are likely to meet with delays and hindrances and therefore may be impatient.

STRANGE—An amazing tribe of Tanganyika savages, who live and hunt in the company of fierce South African lions, will be described by Lewis Cummings, famed adventurer, when he appears on the Strangers as It Seems program over WGST at 7:30 o'clock tonight. Cummings, whose fabled career includes fighting with Pancho Villa and hiking alone across Africa, is an old friend of Alois Havrilla, master of ceremonies for the program.

Cummings' account of the "brothers of the lions" is corroborated by the territorial records of Tanganyika, as well as by several South African newspapers. Accepted as companions by the lions, these strange men "run" with the animals in their search for big game, sharing in the kill when it is made.

MUSICAL—Dave Falvey, 18-year-old trombonist of the University of Michigan, will be student soloist on the Musicales Americana program over WGST at 7:30 o'clock tonight. He will play with the orchestra—100 Men of Melody—under the direction of Raymond Paige, and will be interviewed by Deems Taylor, master of ceremonies.

For his Musical Americana appearance, Falvey will play "I'm Getting Sentimental Over You," the theme song made famous by Tommy Dorsey's trombone. The program also includes: "Schoen Romanique," by Kreisler. "Caprice Viennoise," by Kreisler. "Tambourin Chinois," by Kreisler. "Bugle Call," by Kreisler. "Selections" from Romberg's "New Moon."

MUSIC HALL—A rare treat is in store for Music Hall listeners over WSB at 9 o'clock tonight, for then Bing Crosby entertains one of the operatic greats of all time—Kirsten Flagstad. On the calendar of events, Bing has penciled in a pair of interviews with Roland Young, comedian, and Garson Kanin, the young film director who is considered a genius by his confreres.

To further the prospect of an entertaining hour, Bob Burns will be there with his bazooka, the Music Mads will trill a few numbers in close harmony, and John Scott Trotter's ever-present 18 will take care of the musical accompaniment. The program includes: "Woodpecker's Song." "I Can't Love You Any More." "Virginia Lee." "Juanita." "Night Ride."

GOOD NEWS—With summer time bringing thoughts of the sea, Dick Powell and Mary Martin will revive the salty old tune, "Bar-nacle Bill the Sailor," as a duet feature of the Good News of 1940 program to be heard over WSB at 8 o'clock tonight. Baby Snooks, having just started her school vacation, will be full of enthusiasm that's bound to mean trouble for Daddy.

Georgia Crops Benefit From Latest Weather

Survey Shows Cotton, Tobacco Aided; Some Excess Rain Reported.

The Weather Bureau reported yesterday the past week was the most favorable period of the season for general crop growth in Georgia, but a few southwestern counties indicated too much rain. The pecan crop near Thomaston and peaches near Gray suffered because of an overabundance of rainfall; frequent heavy showers caused wheat and oats in shock to soil in a few places, and a little too much rain was unfavorable to peanuts in some localities.

Weather was generally favorable for the cotton crop, but some areas were too wet for cultivation.

Satisfactory growth for both sweet and Irish potatoes was noted. In the Millen area, however, conditions were described as "too dry."

Of truck crops, the bureau said: "More rain needed locally in some Piedmont and southern interior counties, but general improvement in condition. Pole beans doing well; tomatoes favored in most places, though too much rain in southwestern areas."

"Cantaloupes and watermelons doing well in leading producing areas; more favorable week for peppers, but conditions only fair owing to dry, cold, spring weather; some peppers near Perry being plowed up and replaced by other crops."

Hartsfield Poses For Bust Portrait

Mayor Hartsfield yesterday had a busy day.

During the morning he posed for a bust portrait being done by Leopold Seyffert Jr., son of the world-famous New York portrait painter, and left shortly after noon for Griffin to join in the Founder's Day celebration of Atlanta's sister city.

Seyffert said he is doing a series of portraits for a show to be held in Chicago next November. Following that, he plans winter shows in Atlanta and Augusta.

Mayor Pro Tem. Frank H. Reynolds occupied the mayor's chair while Hartsfield was participating in the festivities at Griffin.

Red 'Galluses' Ordered; More Sales Expected

ROCHELLE, Ga., June 19.—(AP) A Rochelle novelty manufacturer has announced sale of 100 dozen bright red suspenders to an Atlanta business firm. This initial order was cited by the management as the first of 100,000 pairs expected to be manufactured in Wilcox county in the next few weeks.

Supporters of Eugene Talmadge, candidate for Governor, flaunt red suspenders during the campaigns both for their pants-supporting and attention-grabbing effect.

NO OBVIOUS FEAR OF WAR—No horror of the life which opens itself to them in government service dominated the attitudes of these boys who sat in the halls yesterday waiting to enlist in the army. They simply sat around leisurely smoking a cigarette, scanning the funnies, or talking with the men who may be their buddies within a few days.

Army Recruits Answer Call Of Adventure

Girl Reporter Spends a Day Watching 60 Youths Apply.

Carolyn McKenzie, The Constitution's girl reporter, took her camera and pencil and pad to the recruiting office yesterday for a day with the boys who join Uncle Sam's army. In the following yarn and the accompanying pictures, which she took, Miss McKenzie tells of a young man's day when he decides to enter government service.

By CAROLYN MCKENZIE. Probably the war news, or unemployment, or patriotism—possibly all three—stirred more than 60 young men to walk up to Colonel D. D. Tompkins yesterday morning and say:

"Here I am, colonel. I want to join the army."

These men seem to have no obvious fear of war, or what may open to them in army service. They simply sat around the halls of the federal building, leisurely smoking cigarettes, scanning the funnies or talking with the men who may be their buddies in only a few days.

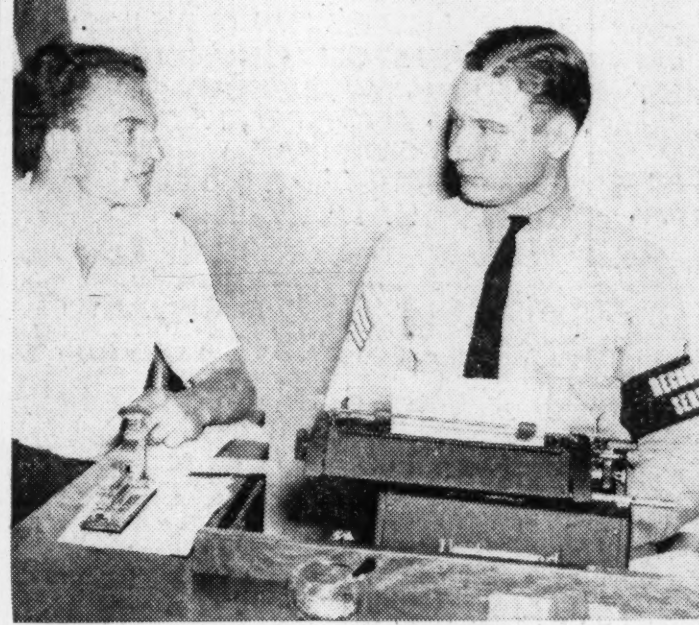

Most of them wondered, however, "Where do we go from here?" or "When do we go?" or "When do we eat?"

Seek Adventure.

By and large, they seemed to find solace within the walls of the recruiting office. They left their cares, their loves, their passions at home. These things they tossed aside for adventure, and service in the army. Or at least that is the impression which one receives after spending a day with these boys.

Before sundown, when the recruiting is completed for the day, and the oath taken, several persons drop aside because they have made some slip in their registration. Probably they're married, or have served short terms in jail, or have been convicted of a felony. But, before they swear their allegiance before the Stars and Stripes, they usually confess.

Just the other day, one man backed off from the fingerprinting apparatus. He had sworn that his court record was clean, that his life always had been straight. And then he shied away from the ink and chart—he confessed his dis-

PRELIMINARIES—A man's day is almost wholly taken up with a registration for enlistment in Uncle Sam's army. In addition to the regular forms regarding parentage, education, employment and other phases of life in the past, the applicant must take various mental and physical examinations. Raymond Cobb, left, answers Sergeant G. W. Burgin's questions as they filled out an application yesterday at the recruiting office.

charge from a CCC camp "for fighting."

Go Through the Mill. A man's day is almost wholly taken up with a registration for enlistment in Uncle Sam's army. In addition to the regular forms regarding parentage, education, employment and other phases of life in the past, the applicant must take various mental and physical examinations.

As a whole, these boys have completed several years of grade school, but only a small number enter high school.

Numerous plans are made for these men after they enter the service. Schools in each corps prepare them for different duties. In the quartermaster corps, for example, they learn the art of cooking and baking. Still other corps prepare them for clerical work, accounting, typing, X-ray treatment, and most complicated and most popular of all branches—the air corps.

No Air Corps Quota. At the present time, the Atlanta recruiting office has no quota for the air corps. It may enlist men for the 29th infantry, at Fort Benning or the Canal Zone; the fourth field artillery, at Fort Bragg, N. C.; (each man enlisting in this division must be five feet 10 inches tall); the 42d engineers; the 67th infantry (medium tanks); or the 66th infantry (light tanks). And thus Atlanta swings open her gates each day to boys from Tennessee, South Carolina and neighboring states to enlist at the recruiting office. The life ahead promises medical care, entertainment of every form, and some work of the kind which most of these applicants enjoy.

These 60 boys selected yesterday a patriotic life for the security of their country.

Ewing Expected At Dallas Camp

Forrest Ewing, oft-escaped Georgia convict, last night appeared headed for a stay in the state prison system's "Little Alcatraz" at Dallas for the duration of his 15-to-18-year jail sentence.

Following Ewing's capture Tuesday night in a tourist camp in Jackson county, the state board of penal corrections yesterday announced the fugitive would not be returned to the Franklin county gang from which he escaped, but would be sent to a camp "which can handle him, most probably Dallas."

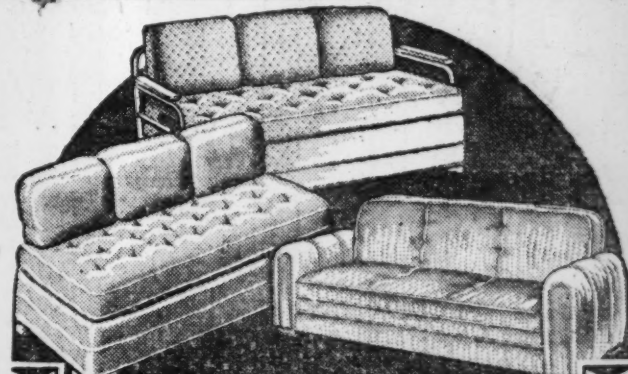

Ewing was held yesterday in the Jefferson jail and is to be moved, "probably" today, to Atlanta for reassignment. Police records show the convicted robber escaped August 7, 1939, from the Franklin county prison camp. Previously he had taken French leave from numerous other Georgia camps.
